STATISTICS show that nearly 2,000,000,000 human beings, of various kinds and colors, live on this earth—a little more than 1,900,000,000. Many have troubles, some are fighting, some worry about debts, but on the whole, they are better off than ever before in history, and there are more of them.

WITH DECORATION DAY past the next stop comes on July Fourth. Between now and then opportunities will be found all along the road, for those with open eyes.

This nation, above all, offers opportunity and cheerfulness. If only the big men could realize that it pays to keep the great crowd prosperous and happy, there would not be a cloud as big as a man's little fingernail on our glowing horizon.

3 SUSPECTS ROUNDED UP AFTER HIJACKERS' STOP ALCOHOL TRUCK

After a chase through heavy traffic in Dorchester, today, in which a policeman fired a number of shots from commandered automobiles, two hijackers who had held up a stolen achol-laden truck on Boston street made their escape.

A third man, alleged to be one of the hi-jacker crew, was captured after his companions had fled in a touring car, leaving him helpless on the truck.

An hour after the escape police arrested two men, one in the South End and another in Back Bay, and they are being held at the City Point station on the charge of being suspicious persons.

The chase and shots threw a large section of Dorchester into turmoil.

Patrolmen Salvatore Di Natale and Paul Fraher were operating a speed trap on Boston street when they saw a truck laden with six barrels approach.

Suddenly a touring car containing three men that had been following pulled directly in front of the truck and forced it into the curb. The driver of the truck leaped to the ground and disappeared.

One of the three men in the touring car then scrambled to the driver's seat on the truck.

The policemen sensing a hijacking job, ran to the scene. As they approached the touring car sped off with its remaining two occupants.

As one of the officers started for the truck the other commandeered the car of Roland McDonald, an electrical salesman, who was passing. The policeman stood on the running board and fired after the fleeing touring car, while other traffic, hearing the shots, opened a lane for both machines.

When near Dorchester avenue and Columbia road the hijackers' car was swallowed up in a maze of

'Corking' Said Prince as He Met King of the Air

By CAPTAIN CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

(To the Special Correspondent of Boston American at London.)

London, May 31.—I have met the King of England, and somewhat to my surprise I found him quite as democratic as the King of the Belgians had shown himself to me.

He congratulated me on my flight, and I reminded him that it had been two Englishmen, Alcock and Brown, who made the first trans-Atlantic flight.

I never forget that feat, and if I seem to bring it up to frequently, it is only because I, as does every aviator, realize what fearful obstacles they had to contend with, with far less facilities than I had.

It was Frederick Sterling of the American Embassy who presented me to the King, and he laughed at my fears that I would have to do a lot of bowing and scraping.

"He'll just want to shake hands with you," said Sterling, "and that's all he'll expect you to do."

And that's all there was to it.

Then I went to see the Prince of Wales, and there was no formality whatever about this meeting. He described my flight as "corking," and incidentally he showed by his

10 IN ABINGTON FAMILY VICTIMS OF DIPHTHERIA

North Abington, May 31.—State health officials will exhume the bodies of two dogs and one cat believed to have been infected with dipotheria and shot by police following the removal of ten members of a single family to the Brockton Contagious Hospital suffering from that malady.

Sunday night three children of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Nash of Plymouth street were taken to the hospital, victims of diphtheria, and the following day four other children were removed suffering from the same malady. Several hours later the parents and the remaining member of the family, a one-year-old child, were also taken to the institution.

The town authorities have roped off the Nash premises, which have been used as a short cut by children going to school nearby.

Police, after fumigating the Nash premises, shot two dogs and a cat, said to be pets and believed to have transferred the diphtheria germ to members of the family.

The animals were buried nearby and later, State health authorities, upon being informed of the matter decided to exhume the bodies in an effort to determine whether they were responsible for the illness.

HOLIDAY AUTO DEATHS TOTAL 21; FOUR DYING

The Memorial Day auto death toll in New England soared to a grim total of twenty-one today as two of the injured died in hospitals. Four others are at the point of death.

Countless accidents in which many men, women and children were injured were reported throughout New England under the most congested traffic conditions this section has ever known.

In almost every section of New England, Memorial Day of 1927 will be long remembered by many families, in many cases the tragedies being particularly pitiful as the victims were on their way to cemeteries to pay tribute to the memory of lost ones.

THE VICTOR IN LONDON

Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, conqueror of the air route to Paris, is shown on the balcony of the control tower of Croydon aerodrome, England, receiving plaudits of throng. The picture was radioed to New York and then sent to Boston.

cruise at about 15 knots on the return.

Royalty Pays Lindbergh Honors at Buckingham

London, May 31 (A.P.)—A young man with keen eyes and a winning smile—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh—called at Buckingham Palace today and told King George how it feels to fly over the Atlantic, all alone, from New York to Paris.

The King received his visitor cordially and before many minutes had passed decorated him with the Air Force Cross, to add to the French Legion of Honor and the Belgian insignia of Knight of the Order of Leopold, which Captain Lindbergh already wears.

The honor conferred by the British sovereign seemed to stump the hero; he flushed and for a second hesitated as to what he should say next, but another handshake from the King soon put him at his ease.

Then they sat down, and Lindy told the King how it was done, talking in a most natural and enthusiastic manner.

The King was enthusiastic, too. George V. doesn't care much for flying himself—in fact he has never been in the air—but he is a sportsman and he is a hero worshipper just like everyone else when he hears of a real heroic deed.

His kindly eyes twinkled as the American boy related some of his experiences, and he was seemingly much taken by Lindy's happy way of making his points clear. The King chuckled time and again at his visitor's lively animated manner of relating certain incidents.

The flier arrived at Buckingham Palace a few minutes ahead of schedule, coming from No. 10 Downing street, where he was received by Premier Baldwin to whom also he related some of the most interesting details of his flight and subsequent experiences. He was presented to Mrs. Baldwin as well as to Miss Betty.

Meets Little Duchess

When, accompanied by Frederick Sterling, counselor of the American embassy, he arrived at the palace for his visit to the king, he found an enormous crowd waiting.

His car, however, passed into the courtyard almost unnoticed owing to the fact that so many motors were going through.

When, however, he alighted at the privy purse door and the American colors on the chauffeur's uniform were noticed, the spectators recognized him.

There was cheer after cheer, and men even raised their hats, while the women and children outside the yard gates screamed themselves hoarse as the hero disappeared into the King's household. Captain Lindbergh was attired in morning dress for his audience with the King.

Several palace officials were assembled in the vestibule to greet the American as he entered.

At this moment, Captain Lindbergh noticed a baby in the arms of a uniformed nurse. It was Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York. Nurse Knight had brought the baby down stairs to witness the airman's arrival.

The reception at the entrance was without formalities, Captain Lindbergh and Mr. Sterling being met by General Porter, one of the King's aides, and escorted through the corridor to the waiting room and thence to the King's private room on the first floor.

Lindbergh was with the King just 20 minutes, and it is understood

Flier Doesn't Scrape or Bow When He Meets Royalty

intelligent questions that he knows a lot about flying.

I don't think that many knew that I tried out my plane early this morning. I just took a short hop in the "Spirit of St. Louis" to see if she really was in such good condition as she appeared to be, and also to prepare myself for the many distinguished people I was to meet.

GOT TO GET ON JOB

Before I met the King I was brought to see Premier Stanley Baldwin at the famed Number 10 Downing street, and that prepared me for my other visits.

It is probably the last flight I shall take in my own plane until I reach America.

I mean no disrespect to the King of England when I say that I hope that now all the formalities and receptions are over. I want to get home.

Outside of being back in America again, and seeing my old friends, you've got to remember that I've got to get back to work.

And I mean real work—not the movies. Yes, I have had quite a number of movie offers, but I can't picture myself as an actor, don't want to be an actor. If they want to take pictures of me in flight or anything like that, all right, but I'm not going to put on a lot of funny-looking make-up and kiss girls who kiss because it's part of the day's work.

NEVER FIGURED RESULT

I expect to leave for America by Thursday on the George Washington, President Wilson's own transport.

I had planned to do some flying about Europe, but my friends remind me by cable and telephone that I owe a duty to the American people, to come home and let them shake hands with me.

I suppose my friends are right, and certainly I want to report to the American people.

But I hadn't planned to become a public character when I left New York. I had planned simply to fly to Paris, and I did it. My idea was to talk with a lot of European aviators and air-experts in the different countries, get their ideas, and perhaps see what they had to say about some of my own. I honestly never dreamed of all these receptions, and my chances to talk with other aviators, except for a few minutes at a time, have been few and far between.

I understand that I have a public reception ahead of me here and then I'll be off on the home trek, and it'll be a welcome trip, though I'm not going to be over-modest and say that I haven't enjoyed being made a hero of here in Europe. Of course I've enjoyed it. Anybody would.

But I hope they'll give me a chance to get the corking old plane, the "Spirit of St. Louis," so that she can pass over in comfort the great expanse of water that she traversed under some pretty tough difficulties on her last journey.

DANGER IN LANDING

That job will be mine, and mine only, crating my plane I mean, and seeing that she is properly stored on the steamship. In fact I don't know but I'll ask that the "Spirit of St. Louis" be given a place of honor on the ship. It seems a shame that the great plane that flew the air over the Atlantic on her first flight should travel way down in the bowels of a ship on the second air voyage.

Those landings have been the danger points on my trip. I have told you before how I feared landing at Le Bourget in France.

But landing at Croydon was worse. You see I landed at Le Bourget at night, and I didn't know that all those thousands were there to greet me until I was well down into the field.

But at Croydon I could see the field black with people from high in the air. I was praying that there'd be enough police protection to keep them out of the way as I landed for I nearly ran down quite a few folks at Le Bourget when I attempted to taxi across the field to the hangar.

POLICE PROTECT PLANE

Also I had the somewhat selfish hope that there would be enough police on hand to keep them away from my plane. The poor Spirit of St. Louis. The buffeting she received from wind and sleet and storm above the Atlantic was nothing to the rough-handling she has since received from those who would do her honor.

I was fearful from the hour I left Croydon until I returned the next morning, and then I found that the officials and the police had done a wonderful job in protecting the plane. There was one little hole in the wind, and two bolts were gone from the landing strut. That was all, two things that can be fixed up very easily.

I never had a more peaceful and lack-thrill flight in any of my trips between St. Louis and Chicago, carrying the mail, as that flight from Brussels to London. It was so lacking in thrills that I hardly know what to tell you about it.

I dropped a wreath on the National Cemetery in Brussels, mounted a bit and then there was England. That was all there was to it.

I want to make another trans-Atlantic flight though I can't say when, and I certainly intend to fly from New York to St. Louis when I get home.

Nearly all the firm supporters who backed me in the flight live in St. Louis, and I owe them so much I can never forget it. In fact, I am playing so fair-square with them that I am going to make no answer to the various money-making propositions put up to me until I see them and get their advice on the different offers.

But even they will not be able to induce me to enter the movies.

12 SHOTS FIRED AT FAST BOAT; 4 ARE HELD

A dozen shots, from a one-pounder, sent across her bow, failed to halt the fast power boat C-6279, but unreliable engines did stop her, and today she was broght in to the Appraisers' Stores with the four members of her crew.

The boat is owned by Ralph A. Wall of Carver road, Plymouth, and on board were Edward Tebow, John Washburn and Edward Cooke of Plymouth and Carl Brown of Gloucester.

They were charged with violation of the navigation laws in failing to stop.

For some time, according to Coast Guard officials, the C-6279 has been under surveillance on suspicion of rum running, and when she was sighted three miles northeast of Minot's Light, on the South Shore, the order to "heave to" was given, but disobeyed.

Thomas E. Finnegan, deputy collector of the port, found no liquor aboard.

FIVE FREED IN "THEFT" OF RENTED AUTOMOBILE

Five Somerville youths charged with larceny of an automobile from Edward Finnegan, proprietor of a Cambridge auto renting establishment, were discharged in East Cambridge District Court today, no probable cause being found by Judge Arthur P. Stone. Finnegan told the court they hired the car last week, leaving as security, a topcoat, watch, camera and stickpin. Several days later he notified police the machine had been stolen. It was recovered in Hoboken, N. J., where the youths were arrested.

Judge Stone ruled that the trip to Hoboken did not indicate larceny and suggested Finnegan and the accused share the expense. Finnegan declined and Judge Stone discharged the boys.

RAIN AND COLD WAVE COMING

The impeding rainstorm, which held off New England over the week-end holiday, is advancing eastward today from Lake Ontario and is officially predicted to precipitate showers hereabouts tonight. In its wake an extensive cold area is sweeping from the Pacific coast and is expected to furnish fair, cool weather when the coming storm has passed off the Atlantic coast.

Judge Backs Hearst Keynote Suggestion

Chicago, May 31.—Plans for combatting crime by scientific methods, similar to those a doctor uses to combat disease and pestilence, were outlined today at the second annual meeting of the newly-formed American Crime Study Commission in the Stevens Hotel.

The commission plans an exhaustive study of crime in the United States with a view, not towards stamping out the criminal, but towards stamping out the conditions tha make criminals.

Today's meeting was held for the purpose of perfecting organization and to map out a tentative line of action. Ultimately, it was indicated, an executive committee will be appointed and national officers nominated and elected.

Justice William Harlan Black of the New York Supreme Court first suggested the movement, called forcibly to his attention by his years of experience on the bench.

Miss Jane Addams, William C. Boyden, president of the Chicago Bar Association; Rush C. Butler, president of the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice; Sanford Bates, Massachusetts Commissioner of Corrections; Judge Manuel Levine of the Ohio Court of Appeals; Judge Ben B. Lindsay of Denver, and Judge Frank Murphy of Detroit are among the organizers.

William Randolph Hearst sounded the keynote of the opening meeting yesterday. He said:

"Are we civilized enough to apply Christian principles to the cure of crime? Christ preached forbearance—that the evil in us cannoot be suppressed by cruelty. A policy of retaliation generally is almost as cruel as the crime, to punish which, it is invoked."

Judge Backrus of Milwaukee, the first speaker at today's meeting, followed up Mr. Hearst's line of thought.

"Society," he said, "always has been a harsh keeper of its erring brother. It is high time that we pause to consider whether the measures to which we have resorted have been justified by the results realized.

"There were 1,800,000 persons brought before the bar of justice in this country last year.

"Does it mean anything—has it any bearing upon the problem—that 22,000,000 American school children either are sick or defective in some way? That is a staggering figure. Has it no bearing upon the case?

"Does it mean nothing, too, that out of every 1,000 men called in selective service not ten years ago, 400 were exempted because of physical or mental defects?"

KLAN TO 'NAIL SMITH'S HIDE TO BARN DOOR'

Lynchburg, Va., May 31 (I.N.S.).—"When the 1928 Democratic Convention is over the Ku Klux Klan will have Alfred E. Smith's hide salted and nailed to the barndorn"—this prediction made by Hiram W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the order, evoked thunderous cheering from several thousand Klansmen at a mass meeting.

Special trains brought Klansmen to Lynchburg from many parts of the State. The demonstration was staged in the home town of Senator Carter Glass, primarily for the purpose, it was said, of demonstrating the Klan's strength to the Senator. Glass was recently quoted as saying the "Klan is dead" in Virginia. Klan leaders resented it.

Nearly 3,000 Klansmen paraded the streets in robes and masks, many of the marchers singing that they would "hang Carter Glass and Al Smith on a sour apple tree."

PARIS DIVORCE FOR HUB MAN

Paris, May 31 (A.P.).—A decree of divorce has been registered by the Paris courts in favor of Nicholas Constantin Tsatsos from May Clayton Tsatsos, who is believed to be living at present at Dundee street, Boston. Judgment was rendered by default.

A year ago, Mrs. Tsatsos learned that her husband, who she said deserted her in 1922, was trying to divorce her in Paris. he said at that time that she would contest the divorce and make her husband pay for the support of herself and her two children. She charged he had gone to Paris with a well known movie actress. She said that in 1923 she had him arrested for non-support, but that he had broken his parole and slipped out of the country.

GIRL BEGS FOR JAIL TERM TO SAVE SUITOR

"Let me go to jail in his place. I still love him."

That was the plea in Roxbury District Court today of Helen Appleton, twenty-two, divorcee, when her sweetheart, Peter Campbell, twenty, was charged with attacking her with a dangerous weapon.

According to the story told Judge Hayden by Sergeant Adrien Edwards of the Dudley street station, the couple have been sweethearts for a year.

Last Saturday night young Campbell went to her home in Brook avenue to visit her. While he was in her first floor apartment a man knocked at the window. Police say Campbell went out and had an argument with the visitor.

When he returned he flew into a rage and beat his sweetheart over the head with a revolver, it was charged. Police found the girl wandering in the street and rushed her to the City Hospital. While she was in bed Campbell came, repentant, and brought her flowers.

When arraigned today he was held in $2,500. The girl was charged with carrying an unloaded revolver and was held in $500. With her head swathed in bandages she pleaded with police to let Campbell go.

"I love him and he loves me," she said. "He is sorry for what he did."

The case was continued to June 8.

WHITE-ROBED MARCHERS IN NEW YORK MEMORIAL DAY PARADE

A police detail of 110 failed to prevent 1,500 paraders Memorial Day in New York from returning to the line of march. They had been ordered out, the police say, because the promise not to parade in Klan uniforms had been broken. The picture was taken at Queens boulevard and Hillside avenue, Jamaica, at the height of the disturbance. Gowns were torn and many injured. I. N. R.

Meanwhile the third man, who had fled from the truck, had been captured after a chase through back alleys. He gave a Huntington avenue, Back Bay, address.

The six drums of alcohol that the abandoned truck contained were worth $2,500.

A short time after the attemuted holdup Max Lande of Walnut street, Chelsea, reported to the police of Station 19 that his truck had been stolen from in front of the Morton Theatre on Blue Hill avenue, several hours before.

This is the truck that figured in the hijacking job.

SACCO RULING DUE WITHIN 2 WEEKS

A decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case within two weeks was indicated today when it was learned that Lieutenant-Governor Frank G. Allen, who is sitting with Governor Fuller during all his interviews with witnesses, jurors and others connected with the case, is going to sail for Europe on June 12.

The Lieutenant-Governor has booked passage and made arrangements for a long sojourn abroad, and has definitely informed friends that he will make no cancellations, it was said at the State House.

BRANTING IN CONFERENCE.

Virtually the only ones connected with the case not yet interviewed by the Governor are Celestino Madeiros, condemned murderer, Judge Webster Thayer and various newspapermen who "covered" the trial and who are said to have had conversations with Judge Thayer.

The following cryptic message, referring to the death bullet in the South Braintree murder, was received from Lynn:

"I'm convinced the bullet which you havei n yourh and is not that one that has been extract out of the Berardelli'sb ody. For further explanations,

(Signed) "ANTONIO TANGELIA."

Jeremiah Smith, noted Bostonian, who stabilized the finances of Hungary in the post-war adjustment, was closeted with Governor Fuller, Lieutenant-Governor Allen and Attorney Joseph Wiggin for a time today, but refused to explain his connection with the case. This was his second conference with the Governor within a week.

George Branting, Swedish lawyer who came to aid the condemned men, was in conference for hours today with Attorney William G. Thompson, defense counsel, going over the transcript of evidence in the case.

A debate in the presence of Governor Fuller between Professor Felix Frankfurter, leading champion of Sacco and Vanzetti, and Dean John H. Wigmore, critic of Frankfurter's views, was suggested today by the chairman of the National Civic Federation executive council in a letter to the Governor.

If this argument of the case in his presence is distasteful to the Governor, a public debate in New York, under the auspices of the federation is suggested.

NOTABLE MEMBERS

The federation numbers among its membership Elihu Root, John Hays Hammond, Nicholas Murray Butler, Richard Washburn Child and Col. Theodore Roosevelt. The chairman of the executive council is Ralph M. Easley.

The writer said in his letter that nothing would be done toward bringing the two Harvard Law School instructors together in debate without the Governor's counsel and he congratulated Massachusetts on having a Governor "who is not afraid to do his whole duty when a real crisis appears."

"The dignified and commonsense way in which the Governor is handling this case is a good object lesson to the governments throughout the world which have been stirred up by their own Reds to make clamorous appeals to you," he edded.

The Australian Workers' Union today cabled a protest against the execution of the condemned pair, as did the Socialist Artists Circle of Holland.

DEMAND APOLOGY FROM EDITOR OF YALE WEEKLY

New Haven, Ct. (A.P.)—A new angle in the controversy over refusal of Yale Corporation to give Edward M. Woolley, 11, dramatic coach, a faculty appointment in the English department was apparent today when the Yale News carried a communication from the executive committee of the Dramat demanding that Edwin Oviatt, '96, editor of Yale Alumni Weekly, "publicly apologize."

The Weekly in its last issue said that undergraduate agitation for Mr. Woolley's retention had taken the form of a "pamphlet riot" and there was "a confusion of interests which, if applied throughout undergraduate organizations, would shortly produce an impossible situation for both campus and corporation."

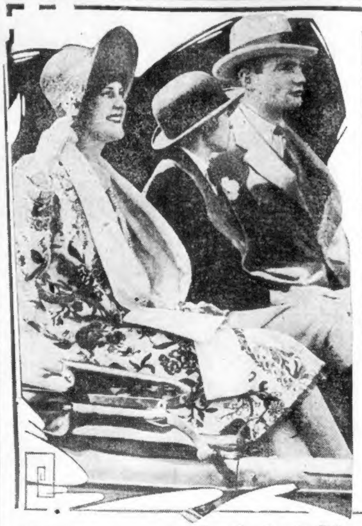
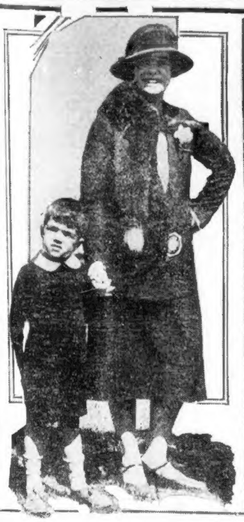
BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY EVENTS



Virginia Ayres Jessie Bancroft Forrester Clark

AT CHESTNUT HILL HORSE SHOW

Miss Bancroft during her "rest periods" sat with her especial friend, Miss Virginia Ayres. At other times the Bancroft string of horses engaged Miss B.'s attention.



INTERESTED SPECTATORS

WATCHING THE EVENTS

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hampden Robb and their two small children were intent onlookers at the Memorial Day Horse Show at Chestnut Hill.

Twenty-Fourth Horse Show at Chestnut Hill Proves Big Success

THE CHESTNUT HILL HORSE Show yesterday was the sort it's very easy to wax superlative about. From the point of view of fine horseflesh there's nothing better hereabouts. And for the 24th show there was the brightest of skies; the greenest of turf; the most enthusiastic of crowds, and with it all much of the same friendly, neighborly rivalry that caused the first show to be held nearly a quarter of a century ago, with the Saltonstalls and the Wests, and the Fessendens and the Adies and other Chestnut Hill families in competition.

ABOUT MRS. RICHARD MIDDLECOTT SALTONSTALL'S motor, at a prominent space by the ringside, there was a family gathering. Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis, Jr. (Muriel Saltonstall), and the Leverett Saltonstalls were there, when they were not in the paddock. Mrs. Edwin Sibley Webster had her motor filled with friends. Nearby was the beach wagon from which the petite and charming Mrs. George Saltonstall West viewed the field and watched her small son go over the jumps like a veteran.

ANOTHER CHESTNUT HILL family group centered about the Fessenden motor. Miss Louise Fessenden was there, and so was Mrs. Edward L. Bigelow, with her small daughter, the charming child Olivia Ames. Mr. and Mrs. Bigelow are just recently back from their wedding journey spent mainly at the Virginia Spas. Another pair of newlyweds in the company were Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Bradlee. The former Miss Alice Lee Thomas was radiant, in smart chintz coat and tan felt hat. The Bradlee lune de miel was a South American tour that, too, just recently ended.

A MERRY PARTY ENCAMPED on the Bancroft motor. Miss Virginia Ayres, bosom friend of Miss Jessie Bancroft, was an attractive figure in an enormous black hat and wrap of bright prints. Miss Bancroft, in riding kit, had to be in the ring frequently to ride one or another of the Bancroft mounts. Miss Helen Rust, piquant and dainty, was in the Bancroft motor, wearing a smart ensemble of lettuce green mohair and casque chapeau of beige felt.

MISS PEGGY PORTER WAS IN riding kit. So was Miss Elizabeth Sprague. So was Mrs. Robert B. Almy (she rode that fine old blue ribboner, "Melody," in several classes). Miss Dorothy, Miss Ruth Neyhart and Miss Lorraine Liggett rode frequently, and just as frequently got a ribbon. Miss Betty Bird and Miss Patricia Bird were in the ring, while their father, Reginald Bird, looked on from the gallery. Miss Betty Bird's win of the blue with "Chocolate Soldier" in Class 13 for the Montgomery Rollins Memorial Cup was a popular award. The handsome Miss Bird takes her horse over the hurdles in a way to thrill the gallery.

THE "JUNIOR JUMPERS" furnished their share of the day's thrills. The very small daughter of the F. Murray Forbes brought in the red on "Speedwater Polly," and small George West, Jr., got the yellow with "Ribbons." Naturally, Mrs. Murray Forbes was never far from the paddock, because both husband and daughter were riding. Mrs. Forbes was an effective horse show picture, in smart tan cape above a frock of tan that exactly matched her small hat. Everyone was vastly amused at Miss Carolyn Lewis's "Jacklift" who got frisky with his heels in the "Junior" class, and then went over the jumps with ease and assurance.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM STUART FORBES motored up from Hamilton to take in the Chestnut Hill show. Mrs. George Richmond Fearing, Jr., was there, radiant in an all white costume. Miss Nancy Patten wore a black hat with her white coat, very effectively, and Miss Helga Gray was a picture in coca brown crepe with wide matching hat. Mrs. Edward Gray was in blue; Miss Rosamond Borland's small hat and dark wrap and Mrs. Rudolph's Weld's printed crepe were bright bits in the throng.

MRS. FAIRFIELD GOODALE brought her small son to see the show, and there was a trio of small people in the J. Hampden Robb group. The small girls were cunning as could be in their shaker bonnets. Mrs. Robb wore black. Mrs. Danielson, superbly turned out in gleaming black, was an interesting spectator. So were the Joseph F. Woods. Mrs. Clarke T. Baldwin in canary yellow watched the Liggett entries capture their many ribbons. Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., with several entries, was likewise more than ordinarily interested in the awards.

B. NASON HAMLIN PLAYED golf in the morning of the holiday, took in the horse show and then gathered his cohorts to play some polo at Dedham late in the afternoon. His Dedham First team met the Harvard varsity on the velvety turf of the Dedham Country and Polo Club for several chukkers. The Dedham men were J. Dudley Clark, Philip Saltonstall, Forrester Clark and Mr. Hamlin. The Harvard four were "Jimmy" Mandell, Holden White, Joe Cotton and Gage Irving.

WHEN THE AQUITANIA PUTS out today she has aboard Mr. and Mrs. John Winston, who go abroad for their honeymoon. Mrs. Winston is the former Miss Honora Winthrop Mason who was married with much eclat and circumstance down in Bernardsville, N. J., on Saturday last. Mrs. Ross Whistler also sails on the Aquitania, her trip having to do with the celebration of her sister Rosamond's marriage to John Cyril Maude in London on June 11.

The great span foundation of Brooklyn Bridge has its deep in the river bed -

THE Building of the Brooklyn Bridge was a spectacular achievement at which the whole world marveled—and still marvels.

It took 13 years to fling that great span across the East River. To-day the people of two cities pass over it in five minutes.

Run your eyes along the wire cables spun from those high towers of stone; wonder at the steady hum of traffic through those massive arches.

But keep in mind that far, far down, sunk deep below the river bed lie the foundations, enduringly built by Roebling 57 years ago.

* * * *

It is in the foundations that the genius of great enterprises finds its source.

So it is with buildings, with institutions—and with magazines. With Good Housekeeping.

* * * *

The span of Good Housekeeping throws across the country its brilliant fiction and entertainment—its new information and ideas that make for finer, happier homes and richer, fuller living.

It has taken nearly half a century to build Good Housekeeping to its present eminence. Now it takes but days to communicate its helpful service—the fruit of those 50 years—to the alert women who comprise its audience.

In a single department—Good Housekeeping Institute—experts for more than a generation have carefully studied and tested every type of household device known to the American home. Other experts in model kitchens have prepared the thousands of recipes that go to a nation of housewives. They pour their rich fund of knowledge and experience into each day's work, into every issue of Good Housekeeping.

In the Studio of Furnishings and Decoration, a pioneer in such service, has been built and furnished every kind of room of interest to the American woman. Here, month in and month out, study is given to interior arrangements, design, lighting, color; all combining the tasteful with the practical.

From Paris, through the magazine's resident organization—in daily contact with the world's great couturiers and dressmakers—come the newest and most authentic of fashion's decrees. Here the twin tests of style "Is it new?" —and "Is it correct?"—are made with news that is immediate and authoritative.

The Department of Child Care for years past has kept pace with the growth of science on the care and training of children. Good Housekeeping experts communicate to the readers whatever is new and sound in this great work.

Good Housekeeping's Bureau of Foods and Sanitation and Health has long carried on its scientific research. Right living, right working, right playing—all of these important problems are presented through the pages of Good Housekeeping from the source of mature and seasoned authority.

And the advertising pages of Good Housekeeping make each month a department of reader service built upon two decades of rigorous adherence to the highest of standards.

* * * *

These are more than departments, these services. They are institutions built into the very structure of Good Housekeeping.

They are the essence of Good Housekeeping—they are Good Housekeeping.

An Afterword to Advertisers

Readers of Good Housekeeping bring to each advertisement in Good Housekeeping an implicit faith born of complete confidence in its standards. Advertisers in Good Housekeeping recognize the benefits of that close contact which exists between magazine and reader. It is because of this unique relationship that Good Housekeeping offers to the advertiser the most precious of all business attributes: Entrenched Good Will.

AD CLUB MEMBERS SEE MEMORY DEMONSTRATION

Members of the Advertising Club of Boston participated during their weekly luncheon at the Bellevue Hotel today in memory feats.

M. J. Hanlon of the National Institution, Inc., of New York was introduced to members as they entered the banquet room. Names of late comers were handed to him on slips of paper during luncheon. After a brief introduction, the visitor rose to his feet and named correctly every one of the 110 men and women present, first answering to raised hands, then picking at random, and finally making a cleanup of the entire room at rapid fire pace.

The stunt was a practical demonstration of theories of memory training expounded earlier by Felix Renick of the same organization. Retiring President P. F. O'Keefe presided.

OFFERS REWARD FOR BOX STOLEN FROM HIS AUTO

Appeals for return of a pasteboard box stolen from an auto on Summer street today were made by Israel Cooper, treasurer of the committee in charge of a banquet to be held Thursday under the auspices of Temple Mishkan Tefila of Roxbury. The box contained a list of 600 reservations and several checks, payment on which have been stopped and representing two months of work by the committee.

The theft was discovered by Mr. Cooper ten minutes after he had left his machine parked near a hardware store. A liberal reward is offered for return of the papers to Mr. Cooper at 40 Schuyler street, Roxbury, with the assurance that no questions will be asked.

PINEDO TO FLY TO WHERE HE DROPPED; THEN ROME

Horta, Island Ofifayal, Azores, May 31 (A.P.).—As soon as necessary repairs can be made upon his plane Captain Francesco De Pinedo plans to fly back to the place northwest of the Island of Flores, where he was forced to descend last week en route from Newfoundland to the Azores, and there resume his flight to Rome.

After returning to the spot where the descent was made, the aviator will head for Ponta Delgada, which is the most easterly large city of the Azores and then fly to Lisbon whence he will return to Rome.

JUDGE READS "OIL"; BOOKSELLER IS HELD

John Gritz, twenty-year-old clerk in the book store of Smith & McCance was arraigned before Judge Sullivan in Municipal Court today on a charge which grew out of the sale of "Oil," the latest novel of Upton Sinclair. Over the holiday the book was read by Judge Duff, who first heard complaints against it on Saturday.

Judge Duff decided there were several passages that "were intended to corrupt the morals of youth" and he issued the warrant. At the request of the police the case against Gritz was continued until June 9.

WIFE WINS DIVORCE FROM ATTORNEY CARR

Mrs. Lucy A. Carr, formerly of Medford, won a decree nisi in Middlesex Superior Court today after she described a scene at her home, where her rival boasted that she had the love of Attorney Fred Parker Carr.

Her rival, Mrs. Carr testified, was a Mrs. Elizabeth Durner.

Mrs. Carr also testified her husband was cruel to her. "He once grabbed me by the neck and threw me to the floor," she said.

BARGAINS AND SALE HELP THE SERVICE MEN

Everything from golfsticks to infants' apparel will be sold tomorrow from 10 until 3 o'clock at the clearance sale of rummage at the Trash and Treasure Shop conducted at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club, No. 8 Fayette street. The group in charge, headed by Mrs. Arthur J. Kelly and Mrs. John P. Feeney, assisted by Mrs. R. D. Coe, Mrs. Clara Senia, Miss Margaret Slade, Mrs. Thomas E. Cady and Mrs. John R. O'Neil.

U. S. LEGATION WILL QUIT PEKIN

Shanghai, May 31 (A.P.).—In view of a possible northern collapse, the military experts here, after a consultation, have decided that additional forces are necessary to protect foreign lives and property in Tientsin and Peking.

Washington, May 31 (A.P.).—Anticipating a possible danger in disturbances in Northern China, President Coolidge has approved a State Department plan for transferring the Peking Legation of the United States to some point nearer the coast.

The plan for the transfer will not be carried out unless conditions develop a more serious aspect. Dispatches from China recently have indicated victories by the Southern Nationalist troops, and these reports were intensified today by news of a wholesale retreat on the part of Northern troops.

It was during such a retreat that the Nanking incident, with its threatening complications occurred, involving the use of guns of American and British warships in protecting foreign lives.

It was indicated recently that if the necessity arose Americans in Northern China might be concentrated in Tientsin.

SEEK BLONDE IN DEATH MYSTERY AT HOTEL

Police today established the indentity of "K. B Holmes of Springfield," who was found dead in a room at the Hotel Commonwealth a few minutes after a woman had notified hotel authorities he was ill, as Harry Bratton Kennedy, 54, married, of No. 193A Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, a restaurant owner.

Efforts are being made to find the blonde woman who was registered as his wife, and who is believed to have fled the apartment and to have then telephoned the hotel office of Kennedy's plight. She is described as much younger than Kennedy and fashionably dressed.

Kennedy, police said, made his home with his wife, Mrs. Emma Blanche Kennedy, and his mother. The wife was prostrated after identifying the body of her husband at the Northern mortuary. At that time she was not apprised of the existence of the blonde.

Identification was made through papers found in Kennedy's pocket. Sergt Thomas Connolly and Patrolman Albert R. Fagan of Station 3 handled the investigation.

According to the police, Kennedy and the unknown blonde registered as "Mr. and Mrs. K. B. Holmes of Springfield" and were assigned to a room. Later the woman was seen to leave the hotel hurriedly.

A few minutes later John Verennese, head bellman, received a telephone message from a woman saying "Holmes" was very ill.

He was found apparently dead and Dr. Mark Ritner was summoned. He pronounced "Holmes" dead and notified Medical Examiner Magrath.

Kennedy's wife told the police he had not been in good health recently and had been treated for high blood pressure. The exact cause of death will not be known until the medical examiner makes his report.

Fists Play Tunes on Organist's Chin, But He Plays on

The weepy, tremulous strains of "Remembering" pealing from the organ in a South End theatre, failed to stir any tender memories in Paul F. Sciala of the South End.

Paul, apparently, got the strains confused with the Macedonian war cry, for he walked down the aisle to the orchestra pit and planted several swift punches on the chin of Bertram Cohen, the organist.

Cohen has the soul of a true musician. He took the punches on the jaw but his fingers continued to glide deftly over the keys. He couldn't put up a guard while he was playing, so he took, in sporting parlance, "everything Sciala had." The strains of "Remembering" became a bit feeble and shaky at times, as right and left jabs landed on the unprotected jaw, but Cohen was still struggling manfully on when a policeman and the theatre manager dragged Sciala from the pit.

In Municipal Court today Sciala was fined $25 for hitting the organist and $10 for disturbing the peace. He pleaded guilty.

KING BEN GOING TO COURT ON STRETCHER

St. Joseph, Mich., Mey 31.—"King" Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David, will testify in the State's suit to dissolve the colony. He will be questioned regarding alleged mistreatment of young girls in the colony.

"King" Ben will be brought into court on a stretcher to face his accusers. If he is seriously ill his deposition will be taken at his bedside in the House of David, W. J. Barnard, defense attorney, said.

At the same time the State announced it will fight any move to take Purnell's deposition at his bedside instead of bringing him into court.

"Purnell is shamming sickness for public sympathy," said Prosecutor George H. Bookwalter. "I understand Purnell is weakening himself through a self imposed fast, but we intend to bring him into court."

KELLY GETS 10 YEARS IN THE MACKAYE CASE

Los Angeles, May 31 (A.P.).—Paul Kelly, motion picture juvenile, convicted last week of manslaughter, as a result of his fatal fist fight with Ray Raymond, musical comedy actor, today was sentenced to from one to ten years in State prison.

Oral notice of appeal was filed and Kelly was returned to jail without bond.

MEXICO ORDERS EMBARGO ON U. S. GOODS

Mexico City, May 31 (A.P.).—An official boycott by governmental departments against American goods has been decreed by President Calles as a reprisal for "the systematic embargo placed by the United States on merchandise bought by different governmental departments in the United States."

The decree considers the "embargo" injurious and due to unjustified delays.

The presidential decree instructs governmental departments not to buy directly or indirectly furniture, machinery or any kind of goods in the United States and instructs the foreign office to order the Mexican embassy and consulates in the United States not to make any payments contrary to this decision.

Potter Elected

Omaha, Neb., May 31 (A.P.)—The Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford, Ct., was elected president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions by the National Council of the Congregational Church today.

12-MILE FISH PRESERVE IS 'CAL'S' OWN

Rapid City, S. D., May 31 (A.P.).—Twelve miles of the "finest trout streams in the Black Hills" have been set aside for the sole use of President Coolidge. Seven miles of the streams are within four and six miles of the lodge, readily accessible by automobile.

Five miles of stream, high in the hills where the rainbow trout are best, is a few miles west and north of Custer, in the Harney National Forest.

"Ed" Rhoades, cattle rancher with 1,500 acres just northeast of the park, has donated two miles of Squaw Creek to be reserved for the President. This stream, Mr. Johnson said, abounds with brook or Lochlaven trout.

Colonel Edward A. Starling, assigned to investigate facilities, apparently is satisfied with arrangements. He was fishing in the hills in an effort to improve his luck of last evening, when he pulled a 12-inch Lochlaven beauty from Rapid Creek in five minutes.

High on the summit of lookout Mountain, known to the old-timers as "Sheep Mountain," workmen were constructing a massive rustic tower to soar fifty feet above the second loftiest peak in the Black Hills.

Construction of additional cabins for quarters will begin at once.

ST. LOUIS PILOT HOLDS LEAD IN BALLOON RACE

Akron, O., May 31 (A.P.)—Captain Harry E. Honeywell, dean of the 15 American balloon racers, who took off yesterday from here in the national elimination race, apparently held the lead today in the annual classic.

Honeywell's St. Louis Rotary Club entry passed over Portsmouth penitentiary at Kingston, Ont., just before noon. Kingston is about 340 miles from here. Occupants of the low-flying balloon called to the guards at the penitentiary to learn their location, and the huge bag rose and flew swiftly away to the east.

Captain Honeywell was the first pilot reported out of the United States.

Navy balloon No. 3, second to take off from Akron, landed shortly after 10:20 today about 10 miles west of Syracuse and approximately 300 miles from the starting point.

The United States Army Air Corps balloon, S-243, landed at 10:20 a. m. today at Martinsburg, Lewis County, N. Y.

The Navy balloon No. 1 was forced down by a thunderstorm at Pope Mills, St. Lawrence County, N. Y.

The Detroit No. 1 passed over Wilkesbarre, Pa., at 8:40 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, and the Scripps-Howard was sighted over Alexander, N. Y., near Batavia at 5 o'clock. Wilkesbarre is approximately 300 miles due east of Akron and Alexander is about 200 miles northeast.

Speedy in Autos, Slow in Paying the Fiddler

Eleven motorists, including one minister and a law student, strolled into Judge James H. Devlin's traffic section of Municipal Court, an hour or so late, today and discovered that their tardiness was costly.

Sixty-four motorists who violated traffic laws had appeared in court and on time and escaped with fines of $5 each. The tardy ones paid just twice that fine, or $10.

"Your summonses all read for you to appear at 9.30 o'clock" said the judge in pronouncing sentence. "Punctuality is very essential in business and that goes for the business of this court."

The summer traffic drive is on and seventy-five or more traffic cases are listed for each court day in June.

Opportunity knocks daily in the help wanted columns of the Classified Ads. Classifications 50 and 53.

LITA SHIELDS NAMES OF WOMEN IN CHAPLIN CASE

Los Angeles, May 31 (A.P.).—The names of seven women, four of them "prominent film actresses," mentioned in Lita Grey Chaplin's divorce complaint against Charles Chaplin, were safe from publication for the time at least with the agreement of the film comedian's wife to make a deposition today for the ears of the rival attorneys in the case alone.

KING GEORGE AGAIN CONFERS HONORS ON 'VIKING OF SKY'

Lindbergh did his share of the talking, although his royal host showed much curiosity about some of his experiences and asked numerous questions.

Only a few minutes elapsed after the audience began before the King bestowed the cross on the aviator.

It was noticed that Lindbergh did not wear it when he left, but carried it in its case, much to the disappointment of the crowd of photographers awaiting him.

During his visit to the palace, Lindbergh met Queen Mary.

The Queen entered after Lindbergh and the King had been chatting for a short while.

The King thereupon presented the flier to the Queen, who was also intensely interested in hearing the details of the New York-Paris flight.

After taking leave of the King, Lindy descended the stairs to the equerry's room, where he remained some time chatting with the equerry. During the conversation they exchanged autographs.

Finally, glancing at his wrist watch, Lindbergh remarked that it was about time he was due at York House to visit the Prince of Wales. As he started to leave with Mr. Sterling, he again encountered the baby Princess Elizabeth.

This time, the airman, walking across the vestibule, took her little hand and shook it, much to the delight of the nurse. Then he patted the Princess' cheek and chucked her under the chin.

All Ask Autographs

Upon leaving he took her tiny chubby fingers in his great hands and pressed them tenderly.

As he turned to go he was surrounded by members of the palace household, all eager for autographs, which he gave until his fountain pen ran dry.

Then he proceeded to York House, St. James Palace, only a few minutes away.

The Prince of Wales, whom he was to visit, had taken part in the rehearsal for the King's birthday trooping of the colors on the Horse Guard's parade, part of which ceremony Lindbergh and Mr. Sterling witnessed while with Premier Baldwin and his family on the balcony of No. 10 Downing street.

The heir-apparent to the throne was in uniform for the military ceremony and only had a few minutes to change to civilian dress for receiving the airman.

The procedure at York House was similar to that at Buckingham Palace.

Lindbergh was escorted to the Prince's room, where they engaged in talk for nearly 15 minutes.

The Prince is an aviation enthusiast and one of his first flights was with Brigadier-General William Mitchell, who was in charge of aviation when the Americans were on the Rhine.

Lindbergh left St. James Palace as the clock in the tower chimed 11:30. The police had cleared the courtyard, but the nearby streets were jammed.

The flier and Counselor Sterling left by way of Pall Mall, while most of the spectators expected they would go out the other exit. Nevertheless there were great cheers as the crowd got a fleeting glimpse of their car in the distance.

Cheered by Throngs

They proceeded to the American Embassy, where the aviator was given a chance to catch his breath, change his clothes and start for the Claridge, where he had luncheon with Sir Samuel Hoar, the Air Minister; Sir Sefton Brancker and other notables of Great Britain's Royal Air Force and civil aviation.

At tea time Lindbergh was due at the House of Commons to have bread and butter, jam, cakes and tea with Lady Astor, American-born member of the Commons, and get a glimpse into the inner workings of the Parliament houses over which he flew on his arrival from Brussels.

Guest of Aero Club

Tonight he is the guest of the Royal Aero Club, when he meets Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, who, with the late Sir John Alcock, made the first non-stop airplane flight over the Atlantic in June, 1919, from Newfoundland to Ireland.

Sir Arthur came to London from his home at Swansea, Wales, to present his congratulations to an American.

British Air Chief Lauds Lindy's "Courageous Flight"

London, May 31.—Sir Samuel Hoare, British air minister, today paid tribute to Captain Charles A. Lindbergh as "a young man whose spirit of adventure has lighted up the world with the flash of courage" and who has contributed a great achievement to the science of aviation.

Sir Samuel's tribute was paid when he proposed a toast to Lindbergh at a luncheon given the youth at Claridge's by the British Air Council.

"Captain Lindbergh's great flight has constituted a world record and placed him in the foremost ranks of the pioneers of the air," said Sir Samuel.

"His great feat and fine achievement transcend national boundaries as completely as an airplane passes unhindered over frontiers and peoples.

"We offer him, therefore, as sincere congratulations from Great Britain as any he will receive from his fellow-countrymen in the United States."

Lindy Tells King He Knows Nothing About the Derby

London, May 31 (I.P.).—King George, like most Englishmen, had the Derby much in mind today, and his parting words to Captain Lindbergh at Buckingham Palace were that he would see the airman with Lord Lonsdale at Epsom tomorrow.

The King asked Captain Lindbergh if he had ever attempted to pick the Derby winner. Lindbergh replied that horse racing was entirely out of his line of guesswork and that he could not even say what horse had won the Kentucky Derby.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dear Anne:

Nancy Meredith is going to be married the last of this month. It doesn't seem possible—that little girl just out of college. And she has asked me to help her get ready, which is one of the nicest things that ever happened. For it means shopping—trousseau shopping—and there is no shopping more delightful than that. So we've listed and estimated, looked and investigated and this is what we've found.

Evelyn's

Is a paradise for June Brides. There in that friendly little shop, on the 3rd floor, at 8 Winter Street, a girl will find frocks for travel, for street or sports wear, for the informal bridge or tea, the garden party or summer dance, and for full evening wear. Dresses of supreme daintiness, lovely in every line, at very moderate cost. Why, we bought a dark blue georgette, with collar, cuffs and pocket tabs of embroidered net, for $13.75. We found a sport dress of washable crepe of yellow, with its yoke and hems outlined in hand drawn work. A two-piece frock of gorgeous silk knitted fabric, in green, tan and rose, with its leather belt half rose, half green; and a lovely rose crepe de chine with a frilly collar, jabot and little puff sleeves of tan georgette. Each of those was $13.75. And every time Nancy revolved before the big mirrors in another lovely model, she'd whisper rapturously, "I can never thank you enough for introducing me to Evelyn's."

'A Little Bird

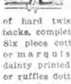
Whispered that Landfield's (8 Winter Street) had anticipated June and prepared some extraordinary specials for us. So we hurried down the hall, hoping against hope that it would be slips. And slips it was, my Anne. Slips of a superb quality crepe de chine for $3.95. Slips that you couldn't buy less than $5 elsewhere. With an adjustable shadow hem, deep box pleats and fine tailoring. In white, black, navy blue, gray and every pastel shade. We found the new pantelettes, full as petticoats, at $2.95. Those filmy confections of French voile, fairy butterflies of lace and ribbons, and undies of exquisite white georgette over crepe de chine, with rich creamy lace, so moderately priced. But best of all, we found silk net hosiery at $3.85 a pair, instead of $4.50. All silk, silk feet, silk top with piquot edge with clear dainty net of woven silk, too. And this was the greatest find of all.

How Can

I throw off the strain of the day and relax the nerves enough for the fun of the evening, or a night of restful sleep? How many, many people ask me that! And the answer is this—Within the bottle of Swiss Pine Bath—Lacpinin Balsam it is called—you will find the ozone and fragrance of the pines. Pour a spoonful of it into your bath and then rest in its fragrant warmth. The oils will seep into the skin, soothing and refreshing, opening the pores and relaxing the nerves, and the poisons leave the surface. Every muscle comes to rest, every care fades away and in the fresh, sweet odor of pines you dream and drift, until you are ready to drowse into deep sleep. Get a bottle at Meyer Jonasson Company and discover for yourself the magic it contains. ($2.00.)

It's Dollar Week

At the Seasonal Sales Store, 54 Chauncy Street. June Dollar Week, with a new supply of extraordinary values ready for young brides, home makers, summer folk and the wise matrons who have been following the amazing values at this store. So we'll start with a pair of white ruffled curtains, of hard twist voile, with tie backs, complete, for $1.00 a pair. Six piece cottage sets, of voile or marquisette — some with dainty printed ruffles, blue lace, or ruffles dotted in blue, gold or rose. Sash curtains, three pair for $1.00, and others too numerous to mention. But there are luncheon sets, with 36-inch cloth and four napkins, bath towels, dish towels, rugs and pillows. Yes—the whole store at 54 Chauncy Street is bursting its walls with dollar values, and which, as the old slogan goes, "Must be seen to be appreciated."



"Must My Flower Be White, Priscilla—

On my wedding day? Somehow, I want color, the first tint of sunrise on the mist over the sea, and the last opal flush of eventide. I want delicate rose to reflect my happiness, not ethereal white." And thus speaks the bride of today.

So Penn, The Florist, 124 Tremont Street, has created the bouquets of color—bouquets so lovely that they have become emblems of hope, high courage and steadfast loyalty. More fitting for the age and generation than the snow white of tradition.

When the mighty moment comes, 'midst the thunder of the organ, Nancy will walk down the aisle to her bridegroom by the altar. And her arms will carry roses, yielding clouds of dreamy fragrance—winsome, glowing, shell pink roses with an orchid in their midst. On slender satin ribbons tiny, tumbling Sweetheart roses will play with entwined lily bells about her as she goes. Flowers of glory, not for the white stillness of hushed silence, but for the moment when the final words are spoken, and she turns to receive the congratulations that are hers as a radiant bride. The bouquet is the gift of her man, to crown this golden day, but the exquisite perfection of each wondrous bloom, brought to its highest in color and fragrance—is the tribute of Penn, The Florist.

'After the Reception Is Over

And she flies in a shower of confetti for the seclusion of the auto, she carries close a gorgeous purse, like a dash of rainbow against her navy suit.

It is a purse of brilliant Roman stripe—one of the newest, latest and advanced purses from Filene's, the most up-to-date store, on "Accessories as Paris would have them." The whole bag department has bloomed into Summer purses, into colors and fabrics we have never seen before. Some of this colorful Roman stripe—alone, or set off with black satin binding. For the sands along the shore, there are cool little bags of raffia, audacious in their ingenuity, yet practical for service and wear. And clever underarm pouches of glazed flowered chintz for the garden fabrics we will wear so soon. Your hat of visca or crocheted straw may be matched to its winsome sister—the bag of the same fabric and shade, finished in harmonizing leather. Then a bit more stately, and dignified mien, bent for afternoon teas and shopping expeditions, are those of satin and grosgrain ribbon smartly interwoven. Or moire striped with satin, edged with colored stitching. Such a stunning display of the season's bags that you stand in wonder and ask, "Should I start my costume with the bag, or add the bag as the final touch? Is it the foundation, or the finish?" And truly, it doesn't much matter, for it's bound to be right, either way—if you select it from the display at Filene's.

Growth Is the Surest Indication of Success

Especially in the business world. For strong, sturdy growth means but one thing—a satisfaction which compels repeated orders. And this fact has been proved in the pajama department of Talbot's, 395 Washington Street, beyond all doubt. The sales have increased by leaps and bounds, with the passing of the weeks. Even now, when most of our men have purchased their Summer needs, the orders keep pouring in until Talbot's have doubled their factory orders and now have a generous supply of the best makes offered at the lowest possible prices, in appreciation of this patronage.

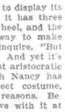
Madras pajamas in plain colors are' but $1.55. Made, trimmed and finished in keeping with the Talbot standard of giving the finest in the market for the money. Broadcloth pajamas in straight shades, too, for $1.95 a pair. With silken frogs and the finishing touches which have made this number the popular leader of the store. Then, going up to the $2.65 price, there are those of soisette, generally much higher, as you know. But there is an endless variety of Talbot's pajamas—every price, every pattern and coloring which is clear cut, neat and in good taste. In fact, this department has become the barometer on values in Boston, showing first what can be done in quality and price for the benefit of the shopper.

The Poll Parrot

Beauty Salon and Nestle Circuline Permanent Wave Shop, at 177 Tremont Street, becomes busier every week. You wouldn't believe it possible, Anne, that one shop could turn out so many permanent waves in one day. Twenty, twenty-five and thirty. And every one a perfect beauty. I've become interested in the work they do there, and run up now and then to see what's going on. For these waves are big and sweeping, like a finger wave over naturally curly hair, without a kink, or a shaft of brittle hair. By a new secret process, they tell me—the latest step in permanent waving. They test it first with the Nestle Text-O-Meter, dye it, if desired, by the Nesteen and Notox Method and then wave it into lasting beauty. This shop at 177 Tremont Street (Congress 6775) is the main branch, but there are two other Poll Parrot shops, the one at 41 Winter Street (Congress 5846) and the one at 40 Scollay Square (Hay. 2903). Open evenings.

The "Nymph"

Has come to Dorart's, 169 Tremont Street. And woe be to you, if you buy a shoe—until you have seen this exquisite creation. For you'll be sorry, oh so sorry, that you bought before you looked. The "Nymph" is an oxford in patent leather, black suede or white kid, which trips along on dainty spike heels, curving high in the arch to display its butterfly ties. Yes, it has three eyelets, a toe and a heel, and the rest cut out in a way to make our grandmothers inquire, "But where is the shoe?" And yet it's practical, too. A most aristocratic Parisian shoe, which Nancy has chosen for her street costume, for three very good reasons. Because she fell in love with it at first sight. Because it is exclusive here in Boston—on its first appearance, in fact. And because it's only $10. Which is the most astounding price for that shoe. For every line and curve fairly speaks of $18. Just wait until you see it, Anne.

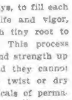


Rent 'A Dress

For the wedding, Anne. Go right to Mendelsohn's, on the fifth floor of the Blake Building, 59 Temple Place, and select one from their great display. It costs but a few dollars, and they have bridal veils, rare Spanish shawls, luxurious evening wraps and even fancy dress costumes. Everything for the formal dinner, the reception, for the bride and bridal party and dance frocks galore. Quaint flowered taffetas, shimmery taffetas in clear, gleaming colors, white satins embroidered in pearls, gowns of tulle, brilliant with sequins. Dresses more beautiful than you could buy yourself, especially for but one or two occasions, and yet fitted to you, almost remade for you, and yours for the evening. The superbly dressed girls, those who stand out supreme in a crowd, are now getting those lovely creations at Mendelsohn's.

Nancy Carries

A wise little head upon her shoulders. A head for beauty as well as for thrift. For she took that head to Mertin's, scalp and hair specialists in the Dexter Building, 453 Washington Street, and had it put in the pink of perfection. A permanent wave, of course, by their own special method, but first a treatment under the Ultra Violet rays, to fill each hair shaft with life and vigor, and stimulate each tiny root to renewed activity. This process brings flexibility and strength up into the walls, and they cannot be broken by the twist or dry through the chemicals of permanent waving. Thus the wave gleams with natural lustre and curls about the face as though it were its natural instinct. Straight as an arrow was Nancy's hair when she went one morning to Mertin's. But now it's as curly as Cupid's, and as lovely as Nell Brinkley's vision of June.



Final Clearance Sale

At Florence Daniels' this week. Grand price of $7.50. On a big variety of Spring dresses. In sizes 14, 16 and 18. Now what more could any girl ask? And I'm not going to say anything more — for the rest would be superfluous. But come — rain or shine, by car or plane, for many of these dresses were valued up to $19.50, and all are selling below cost—some less than half price. And Florence Daniels Shop is on the 7th floor, Ambassador Building, 41 Winter Street.

My First?

Oh, dear, no! This is my fifth. Yes, people talk of their permanent waves in the same proud tone they recount their ocean crossings. For a successful wave is an achievement. And you generally hear it at the French Beauty Shop on the third floor of the New Studio Building, 110 Tremont Street, where Mrs. Young and Billy have been keeping the same clients lovely of hair for seasons past. Just today I ran up for a finger wave, and saw a darling woman surrounded by a halo of new born curls, and a smile of supreme satisfaction on her face. Doubtful? Wondering? Waiting to be shown? Not a bit of it. She had been there before, and knew that her hair would be smooth and glossy, waving gently about her head. And sure enough it was, for they have the genius of much experience, the knack of natural deftness and a sure knowledge of the machine. For any kind of beauty culture you are safe in the hands of the French Beauty Shop.

"Put Your Best Foot

Forward," is an adage wise and old. "But which is my best foot, when both are tired and swollen?" asked Nancy at the end of a warm day's shopping. So I took her up to Dr Saul — Dr. Allen P. Saul, the Podiatrist - Chiropodist in room 312, of the New Studio Building, 110 Tremont Street. Because she ought not face the strain of Summer sports, nor the strain of housework with the slightest twinge in her feet. And Dr. Saul will correct those troubles, rebuilding the arch, strengthening the muscles with massage and exercise, even strengthening slumped ankles and helping varicose veins. Corns, callouses and their kindred ailments. You learn how to treat those feet of yours, with powder to relieve perspiration and ointment to soothe their burning. And then the shoes to balance the weight correctly — only $8 made to order — with supports built in and the finest of leathers used.

'Anne—Here 'Comes

Hoffman's, upon our page. A splendid shop for hosiery which I want to introduce to you. Where? In Shop 22 on the second floor of the Little Building, 80 Boylston street, with two other branches out of town, one at 121 Munroe Street, Lynn, and the other at 217 Pleasant Street, Malden. And why? Because Hoffman's are going to have extraordinary values which will delight your thrifty, beauty-loving heart. And to show you what they can do—this week they are offering Black Bottom hosiery—all silk, full fashioned—service weight, with short lisle welt at $1.49 a pair. They are first quality, too. Also—because at Hoffman's you get a quick, inexpensive repair service which reduces your hosiery bill considerably. Runs and pulled threads are removed and the stockings returned within a few days, looking like new again. And it doesn't matter where you bought them nor what make they are. So remember Hoffman's and plan to run in this week, to welcome them on your list of worthwhile shops.

Nancy's Wired

An S. O. S. for you. Catherine E. Kane offers a new shipment of midsummer models at the price of $13.75. Yes, the same Catherine E. Kane of the Youth Shop, on the balcony floor of the Little Building, 80 Boylston Street, who recently had the big sale to make room for these very same dresses. So here are new printed [illegible], crepe romaines and the washable silks and crepes, lovely dresses in every variety of the mode. With square necks and round necks, V-necks and collars. With tucks, jabots and many pleats. Fluffy frills for the frilly and smart touches for the tailored. And very, very vital to hundreds of mothers—there are white dresses for graduation. A big assortment—an unusual line—and Catherine E. Kane's reputation for quality in back of them. All hats, by the way, are closing out for $3.00.

Harmonizing Fragrance

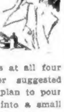
To personality is not the expensive thing you think it is, Anne. Oh, you can go to Paris and be matched by an expert to some rare essence at great cost. But you can also go to Meyer Jonasson Company (corner of Tremont and Boylston Sts.) and get a perfume as delightfully elusive and lasting as you could possibly desire. The Floret perfume —at $2.00 in quaint square French cut bottles. Jouir, Chypre and Chose Promise—or the lovely Jasmine at $2.50. And the staff will tell you whether it is the cool, mossy scent, the sweet, dreamy breath of Spring, the exotic fragrance of an Oriental garden, or the delicate suggestion of spice, that best enhances your personality. This choice French perfume, bottled and boxed so exquisitely makes an ideal gift, for bon-voyage, graduation, the bride, or for the bridge prize. Especially if you give the charming Floret face powder with it. ($1.00.)

Now, Nancy

Is a girl after my own heart. She appreciates Holeproof hosiery. In fact, when we came to the word "stockings" on her list, she wrote "Holeproof—at Talbot's 395 Washington Street," without doubt or hesitation. And she laughed when I beamed my approval, saying, "Gracious, Priscilla! What other hosiery would I dare start housekeeping on? 'Holeproof' has been the standard for the entire family from my baby days. And it has never failed us yet. Holeproof gives me the sense of luxury—that delightful luxury of rich gleaming silk and flawless texture, with the satisfaction of a big supply at little cost and the supreme comfort of security. It won't spring a leak in the back of the heel. No broken stitch ever trickles down the leg. Goodness, no, I don't intend to be tied to the mending basket any more than my mother or grandmother before me. And I intend my husband to have the same hosiery comfort my father and brothers have enjoyed. Therefore, it's 'Holeproof' for our home."

'Add Virozol

To the order for the S. S. Pierce Stores, Anne. As long as my family keep using it up, I shall keep on ordering it. Yes—Virozol Swedish Face Bath at $1.25 and the Virozol Almond Cream at $1.00. And it doesn't matter which one of the S. S. Pierce stores receives the order, for they carry a full line of the Virozol products at all four of them. Whoever suggested that it was a good plan to pour a little Face Bath into a small bottle and carry it with you wherever you go? Unfortunate thought, for Barbara accepted it with open arms, and fills her little bottle from my supply before every dance and auto ride, before every golf date or hike. And she blows back home with her face as cool and radiant as though she came straight from a facial massage. Beautiful Barbara—she knows the secret of youthful charm, and the path lies straight to Virozol.



Faithfully yours,

Priscilla

Try It if You Want Taste

They say "Taste Tells"—and to most of us it seems to be saying that Spring ennui has arrived and everything in the world—especially the food world—seems somehow stale, flat and unprofitable. If this is what your taste is telling you, why not give it a treat—a tasty treat—guaranteed to make you see the world through rose colored glasses? Try this recipe for tomorrow luncheon—or after tonight's bridge, and then dare to tell me there is nothing new in the cooking world.

Cheese and Bacon Grill — Eight slices toasted bread, 8 medium slices cheese, 8 medium slices ripe tomato, 8 narrow thin strips bacon, prepared mustard.

Trim bread and toast to light brown on one side only. On the untoasted upper side lay slice of cheese, spreading thickly with prepared mustard. Then lay on tomato and top with bacon strip. Place in oven under broiler and grill for about 6 minutes or until cheese is melted and bacon is crisp. Serve and eat at once.

"This is how my husband likes chops"

"I SPREAD each chop with a generous layer of Gulden's Mustard before cooking. You've no idea what a delicious flavor Gulden's gives to meats—a richening of the food's own tastiness and an added deliciousness of its own."

Gulden's is more than mustard—it is a combination of the most delicious spices into "one perfect seasoning". You just spread the fragrant golden drops over meats—roasts, steaks, chops, chicken—before cooking (for pork chops use a tablespoon of Gulden's to each pound; for veal or lamb chops, half the amount). Only in Gulden's do you get perfect blending of the mellow little mustard seed with delightful spices.

Famous chefs make food delicious by the same delicate admixture of seasonings. Try tonight what rich flavor Gulden's gives to your food.

"Makes Child-feeding Much Simpler"

"Feeding a child," says Mrs. Earle C. Richardson of Brockton, "is very much simplified when wholesome Bond Bread is added to the menu.

"The children love it, and mother knows she is getting the best and tastiest for the whole family."

3-year-old Elizabeth, shown above, shows the results of her mother's thoughtfulness.

Just 8 years ago, 6405 Boston housewives brought samples of their home-baked bread to Tremont Temple to show us the kind of bread they wanted for themselves and their children. Being frankly copied from the best of these 6405 loaves, Bond Bread quickly became Boston's most popular bread.

Why is it that after 8 years of unparalleled popularity, Bond Bread now enjoys an even greater demand than ever before in its history?

Because day after day for 8 long years, Bond Bread has been uniformly home-like. Its splendid flavor comes from its pure ingredients—ingredients every bit as pure and choice as you yourself would use. Its healthfulness comes largely from its thorough baking. This thorough baking is what makes it so firm and close-textured, as well as so flavorful.

Every day more and more housewives realize it pays to discriminate in bread. They have tried them all and have convinced themselves that a home-like, healthful bread, like Bond, is the greatest bargain a woman can buy.

Discovered—
the famous four corners

Finding the particular four corners of the earth where the finest food-stuffs grow, is a Sunshine achievement.

It has resulted in such blessings to the American palate as Sunshine Fig Bars.

For instance: In Smyrna, figs become plumper and juicier than anywhere else. So Smyrna figs are used in Sunshine Fig Bars. They are crushed with honeyed sugar into the mellowest of jams—a jam that retains its luscious moistness long after most fig bars have become dry and unpalatable.

If you want to know how truly luscious and mellow a fig bar can be—say Sunshine to your grocery man

Ruth Snyder Continues Appeal for Sympathy

By RUTH BROWN SNYDER

Chapter 7.

IN my peculiar and seemingly abnormal makeup the one virtue that I still can say never deserted me was courage. I always had it and I will carry it (and it will carry me) to the grim and awful finish.

[illegible] courage. I don't [illegible] bragging or bullying. I once [illegible] to take punishment [illegible] without wincing. I [illegible] than my [illegible] wept, but it was the [illegible] of remorse, shame and pity.

I was [illegible] in some wise [illegible]. Had I weak[illegible] [illegible] on [illegible] I would have been the [illegible] would have [illegible]. As it was, I had an [illegible] though I was [illegible] over what he had [illegible]. He [illegible] me what to say [illegible] let me.

He [illegible] me what he would say. But as soon as they [illegible] "She did [illegible] for us both. He [illegible] own skin.

All I did after that was feel absolved from further lying for him, and I turned to the truth. But he kept on weaving in his fabric of skillfully strung perjury a possible "out" for himself, holding my form—which he had so often held in what he called love—before him, shielding his guilty and cringing body behind me as he exposed me to death, [illegible]

That was his way of taking the last chance he had on earth—throwing himself on the mercy of judge and jury on the slim chance that they [illegible] by his apparent [illegible] would say "Well, at least the man told the truth."

The plausible little details he threw in, the artificial precautions against artificial inaccuracies, all posing [illegible] dramatic stuff [illegible] his innocent [illegible] expressions, the twisting of facts ever so little and [illegible] from truth—all cunningly designed, rehearsed and made up for effect, the purpose being to save his life.

[illegible] wretched earth [illegible] Judd Gray as well as I do. [illegible] understand how he [illegible] and how he falsified. [illegible] never had courage.

[illegible] I say again I loved him [illegible] and he was the only one I ever loved and though I say I [illegible] courage, yet it was my strange fate to love the man who was without the quality I most worshipped.

Only when he was in liquor did he have any, and that was synthetic, a [illegible] nerve.

He might have gone down into my memory had he stood by me, [illegible] at least kept his lips shut. He was the man I was the woman [illegible] own confession and oath [illegible] testimony, accepting for the purpose of the argument all he [illegible] swore to, we were partners [illegible] crime.

[illegible], it wouldn't have been a dishonest or illegal thing to do. It is [illegible] guaranteed by all the laws [illegible]—by the very Constitution [illegible]. No one needs testify against himself under accusation.

They certainly couldn't have done [illegible] him than give him "the [illegible]"

[illegible] until they wore me down and they never would have [illegible] me had they not told me [illegible] confessed everything (and more) and left me stranded, branded [illegible] not only without him to stand by me, but with him heaping up [illegible] and damaging falsehoods against me.

I am far from guiltless. I am far from as guilty as he made me out, but I deserve punishment. I did not do the awful deed, but I let him do it. I who knew what was in his jealous, greedy mind every time he got drunk, warned no one, and on that fatal night trusted my own judgment and power and made possible his crime.

Starting out to save himself he was soon possessed with a mania to destroy me. For minutes he talked on and on, not under the lawyer's examination. He was running amuck. When the judge wanted to adjourn court while he was swearing my life—and his own—and the last tatters of our humanness away, he protested, at his own suggestion, that he was quite able to go on, and he did go on.

That was the man to whom I gave everything. That was the man to whom I fled to satisfy a craving for—love!

If there is a wife who reads this on the brink of turning to another man for heart's comfort, for romance that she is denied at home, let her contemplate Ruth Brown Snyder, and let her consider Judd Gray.

Such "relief" takes from you all you have and then you lose it too.

It fails to satisfy what you crave and it takes away from what you need.

You cannot rely on it. You must not put faith in it.

It fails when you most have to lean on it.

It is pledged in high promises of devotion and adoration, but when you call on it for more than kisses and embraces it runs for cover.

It is not honest, it is not decent, it is not sacred. And when those things are lacking it cannot end in anything but misery, regret and despair. And then it is too late. What infinite oceans of blistering tears flow from these two small words, the saddest ever spoken: "Too late!"

Shackled Souls by ELENORE MEHERIN Author of "Chickie"

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

When both are young, Roen Ross and Michael Scott meet and love. Roen is an ardent, vital girl with strength and beauty in the sweetly-sculptured face. Her childhood has been happy, without luxury, but enriched by devotion of her father, "Bobby-dad," and to her angel-faced mother, "Dearie." When Roen is 13, Bobby-dad dies. He entrusts to Roen's care the fragile mother and the winsome, adored little brother, Jackie. Roen struggles heroically to keep this sacred trust. When she is 18 they go for a vacation to Gloucester. And there Michael woos her. Michael returns to his course in the university, and Roen to her job as secretary to the manager of an insurance office in Boston. They plan to marry as soon as both are free. Years of incessant industry pass. Roen finds herself encompassed with the growing expenses—finds the hope of a college education for Jackie dwindling. Just at this time her employer, James Burton, pays her court. Dearie urges her to win him. Roen cannot sacrifice Michael. She refuses Burton's proposal. Dearie learns this and fears she will become dependent on Michael Roen comes home to find Dearie ill.

Les Miserables ~ By Victor Hugo

JEAN VALJEAN, a peasant of Brie, in France, supported the family of his sister, a widow with seven children. He worked hard but starvation was never far from the little group. During the severe winter of 1795 he was driven to desperation and he stole a loaf of bread.

JEAN VALJEAN was arrested for the theft of the bread and after a solemn trial before a pompous judge he was sentenced to five years' hard labor in the galleys for the "crime." After four years of terrible punishment on the convict ship he escaped, but was recaptured soon after.

HIS attempt at escape brought him an extension of the sentence of three years. [illegible] times after that he tried to get away and each time was brought back to the galleys to receive additional punishment. When he was finally released in 1815 he had served 19 years—for stealing a loaf of bread!

SOLDIER FARCE AMUSES AT THE STATE

When a sergeant and a private, under his command, fall in love with the same girl, there is excellent chance for comedy. This riotous situation is the invention of Byron Morgan, scenarist and [illegible] writer, who wrote the story of "Rookies," the new film at the State.

Marceline Day

The tale is laid against a background of life in the summer [illegible] military training camps and these are made a background for the [illegible] which are evolved.

Marceline Day has the leading feminine role, the object of the attentions of Karl Dane, as a sergeant, and George K. Arthur, as a private. Louise Lorraine has the role of a cabaret dancer who further complicates the affair, and Tom O'Brien, who like Dane was made famous by "The Big Parade," has the part of a corporal.

Director Sam Wood, responsible for many of Wallace Reid's film successes, directed the picture with the cooperation of the government and a number of army officers assigned to training camp duty.

The story, an original by Byron Morgan, is replete with laughs and thrills, the latter coming from the perilous aviation stunts at the training camp.

Dane and Arthur make a capital comedy team in their initial picture, and it is hoped that they will be paired in more films.

DAREDEVIL AERIALIST AT NORUMBEGA PARK

Cliff Curran, "King of the Air," who performs on the top of a [illegible] foot pole at Norumbega Park twice a day, was born a daredevil and claims to enjoy his thrilling stunts even more than the audience.

When he was a youngster he caused his mother much anxiety by suddenly appearing on top of a roof or in a tree, or anywhere else he could climb.

The pole he uses at Norumbega has been [illegible] to support it. It was made by the Krupp organization in Germany and is said to be of the strongest metal known. The pole is very pliable and Curran does hand balances, head balances, and other forms of acrobatics at its very top.

SPLENDID FILM COMEDY AT THE 'MET'

That incomparable film comic W. C. Fields, and a young director named Gregory La Cava have handsomely conspired to make of "Running Wild," the new "Met" film, a rare entertainment. Though the story is reminiscent of a follow-up on "The Potters" and of small importance in the world of affairs, the nimble star and his men or [illegible] more than a match for its defects. Between them the action holds. The humors of Mr. Fields are irresistibly funny; the smooth and rapid direction of Mr. La Cava spins them along unflaggingly.

W. C. Fields

Once again does Mr. Fields flounder in a sea of domestic trouble. There is a terrible [illegible] before whom he cringes. He lives in a house divided. A daughter his only friend, mother and son his mortal enemies. The dog regards him as an intruder.

At the office matters are even worse. Twenty years a [illegible] clerk and never a raise. [illegible] Bur a [illegible] suddenly transforms the meek lamb into a roaring lion and a down trodden papa [illegible] leaving a trail of wreckage and fear in his wake.

Mary Brian and [illegible] Buchanan are only dimly present in the proceedings with a love affair that is completely subordinated to the antics of the star. The picture [illegible] devoted to comedy and as such [illegible]

The stage show at the "Met" [illegible] Rolfe [illegible] and his jazz [illegible] have [illegible] Evelyn [illegible] singer [illegible] for another [illegible] Jo [illegible] Anderson's presentation "Patches" [illegible] best and some interesting [illegible] Orchestra [illegible] round out an excellent [illegible]

Ruth Tops Dempsey as Drawing Card

By Jack Conway

"I CAST my vote for Babe Ruth regardless," insisted Mr Boston as he puffed frantically at a big black cigar today. "It was one of those back room debates," resumed the veteran, "and the gang was trying to decide who was the greatest drawing card sport has ever had.

"Johnny Buckley, who manages Jack Sharkey, had put up a strong argument for Jack Dempsey.

"'Nobody compares with Dempsey when it comes to pulling the old dough into the box office', declared Buckley. 'The Jack of Hearts drew $1[illegible] against gorgeous Georges Carpentier, $1,200,000 against Firpo and $1,890,000 with Tunney. Try and beat that if you can. Dempsey will remain the box office king until Sharkey shatters his record.'

Mr. Boston

"For single performances, I'll admit that Dempsey set the high water figures, but when it comes to drawing the mob day in and day out we must hand the honors to Ruth.

"When Dempsey was heavyweight champion of the world, he didn't make frequent ring appearances. He was idle three years, for instance, from the night he knocked out Luis Firpo until he lost his title to Tunney in the rain soaked ring at Philadelphia. The dear old public had ample opportunity to be steamed up over the former champion. He was carried into the ring on the crest of a mighty wave of ballyhoo.

"The Bambino, on the other hand, is in there for 150 or so games every year. He draws 'em during the Spring, Summer and early Fall. More people turn out to see him play during a single month than have watched Jack Dempsey box during his entire career.

"THERE were 130,000 persons jammed into the Sesqui-Centennial Stadium when Dempsey defended his title against Tunney. I think there would have been equally as many people on hand for the first New York game of the world's series last Fall when the Ruths battled the Cardinals if [illegible] could have stretched the stands at the Yankee Stadium. I believe the opening game of a world's series rates as an attraction with a heavyweight championship fight, a Harvard-Yale football game or one of those triangular love tragedy trials. Attendance at such things is limited only by the seating capacity.

"The biggest difference between Ruth and Dempsey comes when they split at the boxoffice. Dempsey has always demanded 30 to 40 cents of each dollar that has been tossed into the lap of the promoters by the faithful [illegible]. Ruth's lucky if he rates half a cent out of every [illegible] that baseball fans pay to see him work.

"WHAT the Bambino needs is a Johnny Buckley or Dan Carroll to get him the old mazuma. Babe drags around $1,000,000 extra into the box office each year and is supposed to look tickled when paid off with $[illegible] or so. If Buckley or Carroll were doing the manipulating for Ruth, he wouldn't sign on the dotted line until the generous magnates had agreed to pay him at least $200,000. And at that the big bugs of baseball would be getting off cheap.

"If Jack Dempsey were in on one of those $1,000,000 houses, he would collect at least $4[illegible]000. He received $700,000 as his share of the $1,[illegible]000 gate at Philadelphia which isn't a bad night's pay for any young man.

"RUTH should also have received a bonus for saving baseball following the White Sox-Reds scandal. His home runs made the fans forget all about money left under pillows by sure thing gamblers.

"The Bambino, like the well known brook, seems to go on forever. Right now he is in the midst of a wild home run surge. Lou Gehrig, Williams and the other long distant clouters have their spurts, but when all the returns are in the Babe is out there leading the parade.

"He has tossed a great part of his baseball earnings into the hands of the bookmakers. The Babe has never had many serious thoughts about [illegible] and until recently never put away much of his money. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why everybody likes him. He is still a youngster at heart with no thought of tomorrow. If he was a serious minded young man who always lived on schedule he wouldn't have made such good newspaper copy and would not have won his way into the hearts of the fans.

"IT is a good thing Babe earns his living as a home run swatter rather than as an after dinner speechmaker. I remember back in 1919 when Ruth was at Tampa with the Red Sox, he was called upon for a speech. He got up, fumbled around with a napkin for five minutes and then started his talk as follows:

"'When I came here tonight, there were only two who knew what I was going to say, God and myself. Now only God knows.'

"And now I still maintain that Babe over the years has drawn dollars where Dempsey has only pulled nickels in at the box office. When the Bambino winds up his diamond career, the club owners should [illegible] and place him on a pension. For if anybody has been kind to the magnates and baseball it has been Battering Babe."

Golf Notes

There appears to be some doubt of the British Ryder Cup team attending the banquet planned for them at the Hotel Bancroft by the Worcester Country Club. Captain Ted Ray does not look upon the idea with favor. It was a spirit of goodfellowship on the part of the members of the Worcester C. C. that prompted them to go to the trouble and expense of arranging for a real welcome for the invaders but up to the present they have not been able to make Captain Ray see it from their angle.

The Worcester Country Club has invited Francis Ouimet to act as referee during the Ryder Cup matches. Francis is the most popular amateur player in the world among the professionals in this country and abroad and the Worcester C. C. Ryder Cup committee showed rare judgement in their selection of the former National and open United States champion.

The members of the United States Ryder Cup team will find the Worcester Country Club [illegible] a tougher layout than it was when they fought for the United States [illegible] in 1925. The heavy rains have taken practically all the roll out of the course and the rough is both rough and tough. On some places the grass adjacent to the fairways has been allowed to grow until it is now about two feet deep.

With the rough in the condition it will be during the Ryder Cup matches, there will be no spectacular shots off the fairways to the greens. After one look at [illegible] the players will [illegible] for the [illegible]

Humans Speed Up
Carr and Borah
All Marks in Danger

Mello Faces Big Test
Al Has Class
Would Be Good Champ

By Nick Flatley

ATHLETIC RECORDS KEEP TOPPLING

HUMAN machinery speeds up with the years as well as the other kind. Records in all sorts of athletic endeavor keep toppling, although new marks and times would have been scoffed at a few years ago. When Mark Wright pole vaulted 13 feet experts and doctors admitted that the height of human attainment in that particular racket had been reached.

Nick Flatley

Now we have Sabin Carr sailing over the bar exactly one foot higher. One would say now that mortal will never, aided by legs, arms and a pole, reach any greater elevation but in a few years some soaring youth will pop up with a new hitch or twist and glide gracefully yet one more foot.

Charlie Borah, who used to be at Andover, is newest human flash. He is running now as fast as any sprinter ever did, and he is still quite a way from the age when improvement ceases. Young Mister Borah, as things look now, will be the boy to get past with the 9½ seconds hundred yards.

When Duffy and Wefers were making their records in the bygone years, the ultimate was supposed to have been reached in sheer speed. Now there are two or three kids around the country who can shiver records any time they start. These days the young man who goes to sleep with a record to dream about is lucky to wake up in the a. m. and still own the same.

Big track meets nowadays see records in practically every event threatened or broken. A few are always tied when the real stars get to work. Constant attention to details over the years, and careful study of form and training, have made us a lot faster physically than we were a generation ago.

The athletes fifty years from now will probably be pacing automobiles and airplanes.

AN INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET ON THE PACIFIC COAST WOULD UNDOUBTEDLY DRAW A GOLDEN GATE.

FAME AND FORTUNE FOR AL IF HE WINS

AL MELLO of Lowell gets the big test of his career tomorrow evening, over in New York. He battles with Ace Hudkins. If he can knock that young man out of the path, Al will be the next welterweight champion.

Young Mister Hudkins can hit, and fight, and is fast, and thinks he's good. He's a classy performer. He would be picked as a favorite over the champ, Pete Latzo, any time the pair were matched. Mello probably would, also.

Pete grabbed his title from Mickey Walker who was sliding out of the class by the weight route, and took a farewell shot for money, before turning middleweight. Pete has been careful not to steer himself into any great trouble since.

Young Mister Mello is a real fighter, a tearing, confident youth, with a stick of dynamite in each of his gloves. When he hits the button, the lights go out for the other fellow. Al can stay in there and take it, being strong and courageous.

He will make a good champion when he gets up there. He doesn't take his spots. Fighting is his business, and he likes to work at it. If he can get by tomorrow night's hurdle, he will have fortune and fame and a lot tucked away in his travelling bag.

CLARK MAY SUCCEED MOORE

"Eskie," the Former Crimson Football Star, Mentioned as New Graduate Treasurer

Henry W. "Eskie" Clark is mentioned among Harvard men as the most likely successor to Major Fred Moore, graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association, who died suddenly following a heart attack.

"I don't know anybody who can take Major Moore's place but of all those available Eskie Clark seems the one most fitted to carry on as graduate treasurer of the H. A. A.," one Harvard graduate declared today.

Clark appears to be in line for the position. Since July 1 he has served [illegible] Major Moore coming back to Harvard after a coaching engagement at Trinity.

HOW TO BOX

By GENE TUNNEY

World's Heavyweight Champion

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of 10 illustrated articles by Gene Tunney, World's Heavyweight Champion, on "How To Box."

MUCH has been written about the "solar plexus punch," the "corkscrew punch" and some other blows, but after all is said and done, there are only three different blows in the boxing game. They are:

No. 1—The straight punch—including the "cross."

No. 2—The hook.

No. 3—The uppercut.

All other punches that are written about or discussed are merely one or another of those punches under a different name

The straight left—technically called the left jab—is the basic punch of the boxing game. I think it is the greatest of all—and, in this thought, I have the almost unanimous support of the ring experts.

A man, possessed only of a left jab, and having no other worth while punch, still would find it possible to go a long way toward greatness as a boxer. But a man without a left jab, even though he is possessed of other great punches, has only a faint chance for success. For the left jab is, at one and the same time, a weapon and a defense.

Properly used, the left jab can be employed to keep a dangerous opponent off balance almost constantly. It can stop him in his rushes and, even as it stops him from wading in, the jabs that you land on your opponent's face, count as points for you and these points will aid you tremendously in gaining a verdict.

The left hand should always be kept extended at about two thirds its full length and pointed at your opponent's nose or chin. If he shifts from one side to another, straightens from a crouch, or goes from upright into crouching position, always follow his face with your left hand. Keep it constantly pointed at his nose, or his chin.

Until you are ready to make your jab, hold the arm somewhat relaxed—do not clench the fists. But when you are ready to strike, make the arm rigid, clench the fists and at the very moment of impact have the arm most rigid and the fists fully clenched.

In a posed photo that accompanies this article I am showing how the left arm should be rigid and [illegible] straight and the fist [illegible] clenched at the moment that the blow strikes.

I want to caution you now that if the arm is not absolutely straight and rigid, if the fists are not completely closed, and firmly clenched, or if there is the slightest sort of bend in the elbow, or the wrist, you are likely to hurt your hands, wrist or elbow.

At the moment of jabbing the [illegible] the arm must be as straight as a [illegible]. First, wrist and arm must be in a straight line at the moment of impact. You readily can understand that if they are not, then when the arm, driven by the force of the shoulder, strikes an opponent's [illegible], there will not be [illegible] force to your blow and, furthermore, there is the grave [illegible] that you will break or [illegible] one of your bones.

A straight right hand blow is delivered in the same fashion as the left jab and, as you will note in [illegible] No. 2, the arm straight out and rigid, the fist clenched firmly.

If your arms are a bit short, and you find it difficult to get much [illegible] into your straight punches [illegible] the shoulders at the moment [illegible] you are straightening the [illegible] [illegible] length to your [illegible] full weight [illegible]

YOU don't need a degree from Oxford to figure out why so many men smoke pipes today—and enjoy them. Pipe-smoking has increased at least three-fold since Prince Albert came into the picture. And pipe-pleasure has increased a thousand-fold. And with good reason!

Prince Albert in the bowl of your pipe means pipe-joy coming up the stem. That's the story of P. A.'s tremendous popularity in a pipe-bowl. You suspect that Prince Albert is wonderful tobacco the instant you open the tidy red tin and set free that rich, rare fragrance. That's a treat in itself!

Your "suspicions" are confirmed the minute that cool, comforting smoke comes rolling over your tongue. Never did pipe-tobacco taste as good as that. Cool and sweet and mellow and mild—long-burning—why, P. A. just has everything you ever wanted in a smoke, including complete satisfaction.

No matter how hard you hit it up, P. A. never bites your tongue or parches your throat. You can start in right after breakfast and stay with it until bedtime. You may think your pipe is delivering capacity pipe-joy now. Never mind. Until you've tried P. A., you won't know.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal glass humidors with sponge moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Dr. Reed Tells How Boredom Is Overcome in the Factory Life

IN every large factory or work [illegible] doing the [illegible] over and over again. [illegible]

[illegible] number of people do [illegible] In consequence of this fact, the [illegible] working [illegible] very shorter [illegible] one fraction of the process. [illegible]

[illegible] the one small process with which he is concerned, he soon overcomes all the difficulties and exhausts all the surprises. His own contribution is buried under the work of many other hands, and his only incentive is to pass a standard and to achieve output. He can no longer find scope for personal expression in his work and simply regards it as a place [illegible] to pay for his [illegible] [illegible] happiness and [illegible] unhappy worker is never a worker of maximum efficiency.

A [illegible] with increased uniformity of material there is a steady pressure towards increasing continuity of work. In actual practice, work is rarely continuous.

Dr. Vernon of the Industrial Fatigue Research Board of Great Britain selected [illegible] and investigated them. He found that stops occurred for many reasons, work had to be carried away or fetched, machines had to be cleaned and adjusted, delays occurred in the provision of supplies. Even in handkerchief folding, the most continuous of all, an average of three breaks occurred in the hour, with a total of four and a half minutes. In other jobs there were breaks of as much as eleven minutes in the hour. From one point of view this unproductive time is waste. But output does not entirely depend on productive time. If a worker who habitually sits at work can get up, walk about and talk, even for only a minute in each twenty, the monotony of his work is considerably reduced and his output is correspondingly increased.

The wise manufacturer recognizes this principle and turns it to his profit by affording rest breaks for his workers. He then has a personnel that is [illegible], happy and efficient.

Forbidden Lips

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON
AUTHOR OF "THE TAXI DANCER"

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

CHAPTER 46.

TOM WARE, acutely conscious that he was probably under observation by Lupino, changed not a muscle of his face as May Desmond told him she bore a note from his missing wife. Nonchalantly, for Lupino's benefit, he lit a cigarette; at the surrounding tables there was no one close enough to hear their conversation.

"I can't give it to you now," May said guardedly.

"Be careful—watch your chance. When did you see her?"

"This afternoon—tonight."

"Tell me—is she safe, is she all right?"

"She's not sick if that's what you mean. She's awful nervous, though."

"Where is she?"

"I can't tell you."

"Why?"

Dread began to grow in the blue eyes; reluctance—fear—brought a stubborness to the little dancer's face.

"Don't expect too much of me, Mr. Ware. I promised to slip this note to you tonight and I'm keeping my word. Don't ask me to take any more chances."

Tom felt his own jaw tighten. The situation was rapidly becoming unendurable. Soon at any cost, through any danger, he was going to find Jacqueline and bring her back.

"Whom are you afraid of?" he demanded.

Her eyes stared at him. "You know!"

"Lupino?"

"You heard me throwing a bluff before him a little while ago, didn't you? I'm taking big chances to do you and Jacqueline a favor, Mr. Ware—don't ask me to get myself in wrong."

With May Desmond on his side, with all fear lifted from her, he decided that a speedy solution might be in sight.

"I'm going [illegible] down [illegible] on my [illegible] of [illegible] to [illegible]."

A [illegible] on the rouged lips. "Don't kid yourself, Mr. Ware. You're up against a tougher proposition than you'll see in Lupino. I know him better than you do, and God knows what he would do to me if he found out I was crossing him. We're pretty safe right now because he thinks I'm kidding you along, but if you go too far with him he'd have you knocked off with no more conscience than you'd have in swatting a fly. Watch your step, Mr. Ware . . . for God's sake."

The smashing music of the jazz band threw a protecting distraction of sound around their voices. He glanced around the room before his eyes returned to May Desmond, and wondered if the other lives about him had ever been shaken by anything equally impenetrable . . .

"I've got to see Jacqueline, do you understand? You've got to take me to her."

"I can't do that."

"Why can't you?"

"You don't understand," she told [illegible]. You have crossed Lupino's path and you'd be lucky if you came out alive. I mean that, Mr. Ware. You don't realize what [illegible] God knows [illegible] going to end." [illegible]

[illegible] swept Tom Ware with a fiery gust. "Give me that note. Here comes the waiter with our chafing dish . . . when he bends down . . ." A casual movement of a napkin—the helpful activity of the waiter and the exchange was accomplished.

Only a small card with a few words scribbled in pencil concealed in the palm of his hand. Tom Ware managed to read the brief message:

"[illegible]. All's well with me but I fear for you. Believe me, trust [illegible], don't ask questions—only obey. I can't rest secure with you in Boston. Please, please get out of town for a month at least. As soon as I can I will communicate with me.

"Jacqueline."

This was hysterical! Panic—abnormal, inescapable fear, had robbed Jacqueline, he realized sinkingly, of the ability to think in a straight line. She was no more able to protect herself, to make decisions than a child.

He became aware that May Desmond was preparing to leave the [illegible].

"I [illegible] stay any longer [illegible] get suspicious. You better take Jacqueline's tip, though, and clear out for a while. I know it's tough, but you don't know him . . . you don't know him!"

found some similar "prosperity booster."

Professor Irving Fisher's report shows stock prices are at their highest, everything booming. Even the down-trodden farmer sees bright spots. Cotton is sixty or seventy per cent above the recent low mark. Wheat and corn are both rising, up 25 cents and 20 cents respectively.

It is good news for [illegible] public, not so good for [illegible] who hopes to crowd out Coolidge in 1928.

Nothing succeeds like prosperity.

LAST SUNDAY the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson asked a question that science cannot attempt to answer. He said: "Science says light vibrations produce variations in color. These vibrations register on the retina and are developed in the brain, where there is a color centre." Then Dr. Jefferson asks: "How does the mind get these vibrations? How does the mind know the difference between colors? Science takes us up to gates that are closed. It leaves us with as many mysteries as [illegible]."

Science will reply, perhaps, "True, there are many things we do not know. But when we do not know, we say so. We do not give a fairy story explanation of the unknown, and then [illegible] to send you to Hell if you don't believe."

SCIENCE looks into the atom, sees the electrons revolving around the nucleus, while religion makes the hundreds of millions happy, removing them of worry about the future and freeing them from painful thinking.

Science and religion are both useful, and should be friends, each citizen believing what he chooses to believe.

NOTHING can be expected to work with 100 per cent. perfection, but prohibition seems to have more than its share of troubles. Some of its best friends are worried by a report of Chicago's psychopathic hospital, which, for the fiscal year, says:

"Nine hundred and thirty-nine men and 118 women, 21 per cent. of all patients admitted, were suffering from chronic alcoholism."

AND the alcoholism, it seems, was complicated by mental symptoms, which shows what kind of whiskey is bootlegged to the American public. Of course, the hand of Providence may be in it. Bootlegging, which naturally acquires the mentally weak for customers, may in the end [illegible] the mental average by killing [illegible] the [illegible].

"LIGHT AUTOMOBILES and trucks are being produced in greater volume than ever before." Such is the official report. There is only one cloud on the automobile horizon, and that's an oil cloud.

Reckless production and reckless price cutting in the oil industry mean trouble ahead for motor owners. Oil is being wasted, poured out and squandered on sandy roads, wherever public officials can be persuaded to buy it at public expense.

OIL PRODUCTION is wastefully managed, prices are low—but today's low prices will be paid for with high prices later.

The country needs a continuous oil and gasoline supply, at fair prices, which the government should regulate.

The nation now is acting like a drunken youth, squandering a rich inheritance.

ON SUNDAY morning four army aviators were killed in a bombing plane that "went dead," 500 feet up, crashed and exploded, coming down through a net of high tension wires. Why fliers should be permitted to rise from the ground close to such a dangerous "net" is one question.

ALMOST as soon as it fell, a beautiful floral tribute was fastened to the propeller of the half burned plane. That does little good to those left behind by the dead men.

It is suggested that experiments might develop a sort of omnibus parachute that would do, for a falling plane, what the usual parachute does for the individual flier.

When you "extend" your invitation write it in the form of a pleasant little note. new hygienic method; new way offers true protection; discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

LARGELY on medical advice, women are abandoning the old time "sanitary pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Lost days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "Kotex." Ends the insecurity of old-time sanitary pads; 5 times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends all fear of offending.

✓ As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "Kotex."

Buy without hesitancy, and be sure to get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

Eight in 10 better-class women employ it. Proves the risk of old ways.

Has this day meant anything special to you?

Can you draw a pleasing or satisfying thought from your reflections on the day just past?

Has it been just one day nearer the grave to you?

Have you added the least bit of sunshine to the life of another wayfarer?

You may not have much use for what has become known as a "service club."

But association in such a group may be what you need.

Service clubs have many members who were once like you—they did not do anything for others, consequently they failed to get the satisfaction and pleasure that comes from helping another.

By combining with those who have the spark of human helpfulness there is kindled a desire to do good to others.

Perhaps some get a selfish pleasure out of helping others.

But that form of selfishness is easily forgiven.

Join hands with your associates in service, if you need an incentive to do good.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE FORGOTTEN NOTE

By Margaret Loring

"AND so," concluded Doris Keene, a tragically plaintive note in her voice, "everything's over between us."

Dolly Winston looked up from her sewing and parted rosy lips for an [illegible] as though she were about to speak, but she only sighed instead and picked up her needle.

"I [illegible] see him," Doris decided emphatically. "For I won't permit him to try and squirm out of it. I won't [illegible] enough to accuse him, I'm simply going to write him a note—tell him our engagement is broken."

Now Dolly did speak. "Don't you think, Doris," she ventured, "that you'd better see him? There may be some mistake—and you know how it is, writing a note about a misunderstanding. Besides, Fred Reynolds is rather proud, you know, not the type to come cringing to you with an explanation after being so abruptly dismissed."

Doris arose, her brown eyes flashing. "It wouldn't be wise for him to try," she exclaimed. "Now, if you'll excuse me, I'll go up and write that letter. Want to get it off my mind."

She tripped lightly through the door and Dolly Winston, sitting in the cozy living-room of her home, could hear staccato taps of high heels in the hall above as Doris made her way to the charming little guest room she had occupied since her arrival at Cadensville.

As Dolly sat thus in perplexed thought, came Jane, the cook from the kitchen in the rear of the house, seeking her.

"Them seeds ain't come yet, Missus Winston," announced Jane, "an' the man's heah ready to plant the garden."

"Oh, dear," exclaimed Dolly in irritation, "Mr. Winston's forgotten to get them again; this is the third time I've asked him. Tell the man to come back tomorrow, Jane. No use," she added to herself as the maid departed, "absolutely no use depending on Tom for a thing when he has a case to think of. I declare, lawyers do make the most unreliable husbands."

For the remainder of the day Dolly was busy about household duties and saw little of Doris, her guest and girlhood chum. "It's a shame," she thought pityingly, "that Fred should have treated her like that—he seemed so devoted, too? Well, I can't blame her—poor child!"

Doris Keene had been radiantly happy, getting her trousseau ready for an early wedding. For four days after she arrived in Cadensville everything had been well, but on Tuesday last she had gone into town to meet Fred (the Winston's cottage being in the outer suburbs) for dinner and theatre. She had intended staying late, and had laughingly cautioned Dolly not to shoot her for a burglar as she came growling into the house in "the wee, sma' hours." But she had returned home a little after 7—alone and terribly upset. Even Tom Winston saw that, for she hurried through the living-room where he sat reading, without speaking, and ran upstairs to her room, shut herself in and locked the door.

It was some time before she would admit Dolly, but at last she did, and wept in the arms of her little hostess pouring out her story.

"I went to Fred's office," Doris said tearfully, "but he was out. The stenographer said he'd be right back, but she seemed rather nervous. The phone rang, as I started to answer it she snatched it up. After she'd talked and listened for a minute or so, she hung up and said that Fred had phoned to tell me something had happened and he could not possibly meet me—I was to go on home. Of course, I thought it mere impertinence that the girl had not let me speak to him.

"Well," she continued, somewhat calmer now, "I thought I'd get a cup of tea before I started back so I went to a Japanese place on Fourth street. A quiet little place with palms banked about to form nooks against the walls. I'd scarcely sat down and written my order when I heard voices—I heard Fred's voice and a woman's.

"'Why don't you let me take care of you?'" I heard Fred saying. 'You know that I adore you, Grace! Let's break away—start fresh and forget everything!' She was crying then, and I peeped through the palms and saw his arms about her. Then I left."

The story ended, and Doris huddled on the bed, her face buried in her hands.

She had borne up pretty well however, even Tom said so. Dolly could not but admire her spirit, and yet she could see tragedy in the girl's eyes. Doris was an only child of wealthy people, a pampered spoiled darling. Probably this was her first serious reverse. Could it be that Fred Reynolds, a struggling young architect, had planned to marry the girl for her money? This ignominious fact had doubtless been apparent to the girl when she learned of his perfidy. So he had another sweetheart, did he? And he was forcing himself to give her up—Doris having been an unwitting witness to the last scene in his abnegation! Well, Doris was right, thought little Mrs. Winston. Better simply to write him that the engagement had come to an end.

Dolly gave Doris' letter to her husband next morning after breakfast. "Take it to Fred's office and give it to him," she said. "It will be more final."

The morning was a long one, and she tried in vain to cheer her guest who seemed now especially downhearted since she had taken the final step in dismissing Fred. She was reading aloud to the girl when the bell rang, and Jane, answering it, ushered in a stranger, a rather pallid, young woman who glanced timidly at Doris and smiled. Doris gave a gasp of surprise and sat up.

"I'm afraid you don't understand about Tuesday night, Miss Keene," said the stranger in a frightened voice. "I—I came to explain—about Fred, I mean. You see, Fred's very fond of me. I—I married a man—a very good man whom I loved, but he had an awful habit. He takes dope—Miss Keene, and I've really had an awful time. Tuesday afternoon I got frightened and I went to Fred and told him—you see, he didn't know about my husband before. And he came at once and took him to a sanatorium! Oh, I've had such an awful time!"

"Won't you sit down and finish what you have to say?" Dolly spoke kindly, though she was completely baffled.

"Thank you," the stranger took a chair. "Fred got back this morning—but he came out to see me; he's been getting my affairs straight all day, so I can get away. But something he said made me think maybe you might not understand so as soon as I could leave the baby—"

"It was good of you to come and tell me all this," Doris said coldly. "But why did you think I'd be interested."

The stranger hesitated, clasping and unclasping her hands nervously in her lap. "I—I thought that you and Fred—you see I'm Fred's sister—his half sister, that is—and I didn't want you to misunderstand about me. You see, Fred's been very good to me since my mother died. He's a wonderful boy—and he loves you to distraction. I think if anything came between you, Miss Keene, any misunderstanding—"

"Oh, forgive me." Doris had crossed the room and clasped the hands of the pale girl. "I—I didn't understand—I didn't know—"

"Good Heavens, Doris," her hostess cried, "that note you gave Tom! That note."

And at that moment Tom Winston, home for luncheon, strolled into the room.

Doris gasped when she saw him, and Dolly clutched his arm, incoherent for a moment. "Tom," she finally managed to say, "you remember this morning I gave you a note—a note Doris wrote—and I told you—"

A blank expression crossed her young husband's face, and then he looked from his wife to his guest, rather fearfully.

"I'm dreadfully sorry, girls!" he said in all contrition. "I forgot all about it! It's in my pocket this minute!" He pulled it out and held it up before their gaze. "But I'll go right to Fred's office and deliver it when I get back—"

"Oh, you won't!" Doris snatched it from his fingers and tore it into a hundred pieces.

And Tom Wilson, out of the fullness of his experience as a married man, was most astounded to hear his wife saying: "Thank goodness you forgot!"

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

ONE of our foremost teachers says that a man doesn't need a college education in order to be a success. This professor's right. If a boy is smart he can learn to shoot craps at home.

SOME of the brainiest financiers in the country got their first arithmetic lessons off a pair of dice.

EVERY alley was a class room.

THEY used ivory text books.

THEY'D break hard over some mathematical problem until a cop would come along and break up their study period.

ONE fellow who's going to Yale says he isn't getting a real college education because he hasn't got a raccoon coat.

THE boy's father lost a lot of money on the stock market last month and had to cut off his son's gin.

HE takes his English and French in earnest, but he wants his Scotch in bottles.

SINCE his father stopped his allowance he had to give up astronomy. He can't afford to go out at night any more.

BUT his mother is a real pal. She is sharing her cigarettes with him.

HE'S studying to be a linguist so that when he comes home he can call his father names in three languages.

RIGHT now he's only following two things. Geometry and co-eds.

HE got into a fraternity last week but that was because somebody left one of the windows open.

HIS ambition is to be a furniture manufacturer and build electric chairs for Sing Sing.

HE started in to be an anatomist, but he devoted most of his time to necking.

HE learned to be very ambidextrous. He finally got so that he could lug a girl with either arm.

HE'S so good at petting that when he gets out of college he'll probably wind up by being a chiropractor.

The American wife's idea of a "brute" is a man who is so stingy that he forces her to put up with cheap home-made American divorce, when all her friends have smart, imported Paris decrees!

* * *

Most of us go into marriage with the impression that it is going to be one long, glorious Saturday night, and then are aggrieved when it turns out to be just a succession of blue Monday mornings.

* * *

The average bridesmaid regards the bride with envy; but the best man's attitude toward the bridegroom is more likely to be that of "Old-Man,-I'd-bear-this-for-you-if-I-could — but-Gosh,-you-have-my-sympathy,-anyway!"

Three-year-old Louise came running into her mother one day saying:

"Oh, mama, auntie just called you an old lady."

Mother: "No, dear, I don't think auntie said that."

Louise: "Oh, yes, mama. I told her she needed a haircut and she said, 'So's your old lady.'"

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS ABROAD

AN especially interesting race of people are the Hamrans, a tribe belonging to the Nubian race and ranging the Nile Valley.

The tribe is of great hunting stock. Arabs, and of medium stature, they are most fearless in the hunt for big game. The average height of these people is five feet eight inches, and they rely chiefly on agility, swiftness and courage rather than upon strength or huge stature.

Their principal weapon is a two-edged sword about three feet long, which may be held with both hands. Their method of hunting elephants is perhaps their most dangerous and glamorous activity. This fearless tribe hunts its quarry either on foot or on horseback. In the former case they usually stalk the animal when it is having its noonday sleep; they steal up to it quietly, and with one blow sever its trunk. It is then left to bleed to death, an hour being the time usually required.

In the event that the elephant is not asleep when approached, they creep up behind it and sever the back sinew of the hind leg, about a foot from the heel. This disables the beast and the other sinew can then be cut. As in the former case, the animal dies of bleeding.

The more common method of these people is to hunt on horseback. This is usually done by four men. They sight an elephant herd and draw the attention of one elephant until he pursues them. Then, one of the horsemen stays just in front and out of reach of the beast, while the other two men ride up from behind and leap to the ground and sever the tendon of the rear leg. The animal comes down so heavily on the injured member in his next step that he dislocates the joint and is rendered helpless.

The rhinoceros is killed in almost the same manner as the elephant. He is faster on his feet and he can also run on three legs, thus making it impossible to disable him at one blow.

It is interesting to note that this Arab Hamran race should adopt such perilous occupations when they seem so unfitted physically. But they are a great race of hunters.

"For the first time in five years, mills have profits on their cotton, bought after prices broke last year and before the Mississippi floods strengthened them," he says.

DON'T GIVE UP GOOD UTILITY HOLDINGS

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Don't give up your good New England public utility holdings because someone is trying to "shake you out" of them. If you are satisfied with the investment yield of your power and light shares at the current market, what sound reason could you have for selling? Of course, if you need the money, that is different. Just now there are some cases where it looks as if there was an attempt to scare holders in some of the very good unlisted issues. The stockholders are told they have "dropped from recent highs." The chances are they are a good deal above what the investors originally paid for them. For the present this difference could be regarded merely as an additional margin of safety.

Worcester County's new $36,000,000 national bank, a consolidation of the Merchants National Bank of Worcester and the Fitchburg Bank and Trust Co., was announced as bringing into being the "first national bank in New England." And it might have been added that it is the first in the United States. Again New England leads the way. The Worcester County National Bank was organized under provisions of the new McFadden Act, the important piece of banking legislation in the framing of which Congressman Robert Luce of Somerville is credited with having had much to do.

Rep. Luce

Under the McFadden act a bank may have a branch in the same county. Everyone knows that county lines are formed usually by accident, but sometimes by design. They recall the term "gerrymander," now generally applied to the process of arranging political districts in such a manner as to give a majority of Congressmen, or State legislators, to the party having the minority in the popular vote of the State. The "gerrymander" derives its name from Elbridge Gerry, born in Marblehead, who, like Coolidge, became Vice-President of the United States after being Governor of Massachusetts. Coolidge made history repeat itself after the lapse of more than a century. Only recently a famous Gerry descendant, once leader of "the 400," passed away.

To return to the "county provision" of the McFadden act. It is within the range of possibility that this may somewhere lead to fresh "gerrymandering," for some counties are small and others large. Banking influence, which is great and important and often very desirable, may lead to changing of county lines to permit needed mergers and "branch banking."

A bank in Suffolk county and a bank in Norfolk county might be nearer together, both as to distance and community of interests, than two banks at far ends of a county big enough in area to include both Suffolk, Norfolk and some other thrown in for good measure. Of course the McFadden act is subject to amendments.

A college event of more than common financial importance is drawing near. Last details of plans have been completed for the dedication of the new buildings constructed under the George F. Baker Foundation for the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration on Saturday, June 4, when George F. Baker of New York will present the keys of the buildings to Pres. A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University.

At the morning program beginning at 11 o'clock, Owen D. Young of New York, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co will deliver the principal address. In the afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, Pres. Lowell will preside and Bishop William Lawrence, Professor Edwin F. Gay, first Dean of the Harvard Business School, and Dean Wallace B. Donham, present Dean of the School, will be the speakers.

$520
THE ESSEX COACH is without a doubt the most popular medium-weight car on the road today. Its easy-riding qualities and economical upkeep make it the public's choice. A year-old Essex Coach which has been through our shops, renewed and refinished, is without doubt a very much better investment than a new car at anywhere near $520. The difference in price between a 1926 and a 1925 Essex Coach is $125. It would be impossible for you to buy a new car at a similar price and take only $125 depreciation for a year's use. Although we are selling these 1926 Essex Coaches as fast as we get them out of our refinishing shops, there will be several through this week which will be refinished in attractive blues, maroons and grays. All will be sold on liberal terms and with our money-back guarantee. Open evenings.

3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.

When Lindbergh Lands

Massachusetts Must Be in the Front Line of the Reception Committee

A more or less perfunctory invitation to drop in sometime, when he is in this neighborhood, is not enough for Boston and Massachusetts to do by way of paying respect to Captain Charles A. Lindbergh.

When the Nation honors the famous flier at New York upon his return to a proud homeland the Commonwealth of Massachusetts should be represented by her wise and able Governor, IF that be possible, or at least by a truly representative Massachusetts Lindbergh Commission.

We have here one of the finest airports in the United States.

The country knows little or nothing about it; our own people NEXT to nothing.

This is an opportunity to put Boston on the air map, to call attention to the fact that in all America THIS is the airport nearest to England and the Continent.

In commercial aeronautics, the United States had been lagging behind. Now comes this young man, described by Mr. James T. Williams, Jr., as the "most successful Ambassador the United States has been blessed with since the days of Benjamin Franklin," and proves that the airplane is NOT ONLY SWIFT BUT SAFE.

The French, the Belgian and the English people, their governments and rulers, have been tumbling over one another to do Lindbergh honor.

The President of the United States has taken personal charge of the program for his welcome.

He will be the guest of the Nation from the moment of his arrival until in the Black Hills he receives the Distinguished Flying Cross from the hands of President Coolidge.

He will travel as the guest of the Nation, in a special car such as is reserved for eminence.

He IS eminent, as France perceived while his own people were as yet unaware of what Mr. Coolidge characterized in his cablegram of congratulations the "crowning achievement of aviation."

There are POSSIBILITIES in this young man far beyond his already wonderful accomplishments.

His skill, his intelligence, his bravery, his breeding, his CHARACTER, his long experience in the Air Mail, HIS TRUE RED, WHITE AND BLUE AMERICANISM, everything about him indicates potential values to the Nation such as no man may now be able to estimate.

Massachusetts was the LAST State he saw before leaving home on the most daring voyage of modern times.

Let us be amongst the very FIRST to acclaim and welcome him.

The Nation will celebrate next December 18th, the twenty-fourth anniversary of the first successful flight by the Wright brothers, as "Lindbergh Day."

Long before that time, MASSACHUSETTS should have a "Lindbergh Day" of her own.

GO to New York, Mr. Fuller, and let the young hero of the air understand how sincere we are in our expressions of esteem.

Bring back his pledge to visit us at the earliest date possible.

If you cannot go yourself, Your Excellency—and we know something of the strain you have been under—select immediately a REAL committee of REAL leaders, the type which accomplishes things, and tell THEM not to return without Lindbergh's promise.

This flying business is a "toy" no longer.

Airplane manufacturing companies, flying fields, hangars, repair and work shops are springing up over night and employment is offered to skilled operators and workmen who, until the War was over, were unobtainable.

A NEW TRANSPORTATION EPOCH HAS ARRIVED.

We have never been slow to appreciate these things and we must not be asleep now.

Put the Commonwealth out upon the front line of the Lindbergh Reception Committee, Governor, and keep it there, in the name of all New England!

A Municipal Auditorium

What LYNN Wants Lynn Gets

The Mayor of Lynn, who cannot be accused of being a tax-waster, urges that now is the time to begin the construction of a new City Hall and a Memorial Auditorium, the latter dedicated to the men of Lynn who have served in the wars of the Republic.

The local press endorses the suggestion. The people of Lynn appear to be enthusiastically in favor of it. The Daily Item says:

> "The erection of a Memorial Auditorium in the city of Lynn has been a crying need for years. Few cities in New England are so poorly equipped with municipally-controlled meeting places as is Lynn. Outside of school buildings there is none. A comparatively small gathering of citizens fills Classical High School Hall to capacity."

Granted that Lynn's need of such a place of assembly is great, we know a community one year younger, but ten times larger and many times wealthier, where the lack of such a meeting place is becoming almost disgraceful.

Shall Lynn beat us to it?

Fast, Big, Expensive

And Worth Just—NOTHING

The United States battleship Florida makes 22.34 knots an hour in a speed test, and is pronounced the fastest battleship afloat. The Florida has been changed to an oil burner, with 14,000 tons of extra armor and 5,000 more horsepower.

It's a magnificent battleship, costing at least $50,000,000. But half a dozen $10,000 airplanes could send it to the bottom of the sea with the greatest of ease.

If real war came, that battleship would not even be SENT to sea, but hidden away in some harbor. Where were the big battleships of France, England and Germany in the last war? HIDDEN AWAY.

Still With Us

LINDBERGH MAY HAVE FLOWN OVER ICEBERGS ON HIS OCEAN TRIP
AND THROUGH SLEET, HAIL AND FOG
AND ACCOMPLISHED ALONE A FEAT THAT HAS STARTLED THE WORLD FOR NERVE AND DARING
AND HONORS MAY BE HEAPED UPON HIM FROM ALL SIDES. CONGRESS MAY GIVE HIM A MEDAL AND A PRIVATE BATTLE SHIP TO RETURN ON —
NEVERTHELESS — WE STILL HAVE PLENTY OF PEOPLE WITH US WHO THINK THEY ARE THE WHOLE WORKS
ON TH' CONTRARY, LINDBERGH DON'T THINK HE'S TH' CHEESE, AS Y' MIGHT SAY.

GOING UP OR DOWN YOU GET A PUSH

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I AM going to tell you the truth about this naughty world, and the truth is that whichever way you're going, up or down, people want to help you along.

If you are going up we all want to boost; if you are going down we all want to push. That is what we call sympathy.

You hear complaints that the rich are growing richer and the poor poorer. That has always been the case, simply because it is human nature. Society has always been organized to increase the wealth of the wealthy and the power of the powerful; also to make the weak weaker.

The rule is that "to him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

There's no use whining about it. It is simply one of the flinty laws of nature. The only thing to do with nature's laws is to adjust one's self to them and not to complain.

This might be called the law of the inertia of prosperity.

You are guilty yourself. Whom do you want to see? The man everybody wants to see. And you read the book everybody's reading, and go to the store where it is "the thing" to go.

"Follow the crowds," says the advertiser, with his shrewd knowledge of our make-up.

If you have a hundred dollars ahead, to whom do you want to hand it? To the poor man who needs it? Not at all, but to the rich banker who does not need it.

If I ask you for the loan of a quarter you will pass it over to me without a word if you think it is a trifling matter to me; but if you suspect I really am in want, and need the quarter to buy a little food with, that's quite another affair; you can't encourage that sort of thing; I should go to the Associated Charities.

Now, the way to use this law is to feign prosperity even if you have it not. Keep your chin up.

Wear good clothes. Don't withdraw from the society of the prosperous. Look pleasant. Don't let yourself get down at the heel. Don't get that poor beggar look on your face.

It isn't hypocrisy. It isn't pretense. It is sheer courage. It is letting the world know that while you live your purpose to fight, and that like old General Taylor you "don't know when you're licked."

Keep smiling and an unfriendly universe will not know what to do with you; so it will crown you.

Says Alfred de Vigny: "All those that struggle against the unjust heavens have had the admiration and secret love of men."

Fate is a bluff. Face her, defy her, and she will fawn on you.

Fate is cruel, but only to the quitter.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

MAKES GOOD

JIMMY GALLAGHER ("still hanging on,") is a man of his word. Some months ago JIMMY made a promise to the little daughter of former CITY COUNCILLOR PURCELL that he would play at her next recital. Last Monday she reminded him of his promise and sure enough that night JIMMY and his entire orchestra trooped into Jordan Hall and "played" the two numbers in which little Miss Purcell appeared. Not only that, but to be obliging, JIMMY sang a couple of his favorite numbers for the audience.

HAIR CUTTING

JAMES H. McKENNA, JR., of the public works department of Waltham, has acquired possession of a number of copies of BOSTON weekly newspapers, published early in the Nineteenth Century, which reflect to a large extent the manners and customs of that age. That the shearing of woman's "crowning glory" is not exclusively a product of modern times is indicated by an announcement in one of the papers, dated 1805, to the effect that a Newbury street firm has fitted up "a separate apartment for the purpose of cutting ladies' hair." Another Boston merchant proudly tells the world that he has "bath tubs for sale or on hire."

RETIRED

As he reclines at ease by the fireside in his home, in Brighton, POLICE SERGT. JAMES A. MURPHY of the Charlestown police station, who recently retired after more than 32 years of faithful service, will always have the "boys" at the City square station in mind, as through their generosity, he has been presented with a fireside chair and foot rest, a token of the esteem in which he was held by them. SERGT. PATRICK J. MAGNER on behalf of the eighty men at Police Station 15, made the presentation. Sergt. Murphy participated in the arrest of the first man to go to the chair, and was in the arrest of the last three men to go to the electric chair in the State Prison at Charlestown.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Did you read what Roger Babson said about our American colleges so soon to pour out a horde of graduates?

It's Big Talk—probably the biggest talk our higher education system has ever had to face.

Roger Babson is a famous business expert. He spends his life in tabulating the results of human thought and labor. "Man power" is the most tremendous and valuable force in the world. And Roger Babson says that our American colleges are wasting our man power.

"American colleges are breaking down in the purpose for which they were founded," says Mr. Babson. "They turn out sluggards, snobs, athletic morons, and amusement-crazed youths. The are failing to build character."

Character isn't some vague, ethical asset to Roger Babson. It is the ability to produce the goods, both spiritual and material. Honesty, industry, punctuality, perseverance, grit—these are some of the things which constitute character.

AND OUR AMERICAN COLLEGES AREN'T DEVELOPING SUCH QUALITIES IN OUR CHILDREN, ACCORDING TO ROGER BABSON.

He brings some humiliating figures to support this statement. We like to think of ourselves as the Go-Getters of the world—leaders in research and invention. But the facts are against us, says Roger Babson.

"IF ANY BUSINESS SHOWED AS POOR RETURNS ON ITS INVESTMENT AS HIGHER EDUCATION IN AMERICA, IT WOULD HAVE BEEN OUT OF BUSINESS LONG AGO," he says. "Think this over. By 1894 we had more universities than all the world put together. We have spent billions and billions on education in our colleges. Yet since 1894, seventeen chemical elements have been found—discoveries which are the basis of modern industrial progress. OUR HUGE, COSTLY EDUCATIONAL LABORATORIES FOUND ONLY ONE OF THESE. Great Britain found seven, France four, Germany one, little Denmark, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia one apiece. With only a fractional part of our educational equipment they have shown 100 per cent. better results."

Then to make a bad matter worse, Mr. Babson brings up the question of the Nobel prize. The Nobel prizes are awarded for great contributions to physics, chemistry, physiology and medicine. It has become almost an Intelligence Test of the country which receives it. And where does the United States stand in this Intelligence Test of History? Where do we who boast of our "finest schools" get off. We get off almost at the bottom of the list—next to Russia.

It's hard taking isn't it, neighbor? It certainly does put some dents in our nation self-esteem?

Mr. Babson doesn't think, however, that Nobel prizes are the most desirable records to achieve.

"The most important function of the college is the fostering of character," he insists. And this, he claims, is exactly what our colleges AREN'T fostering.

"The youth of former periods entered college with the habit of work established. He matriculated with certain definite ambitions. HE BROUGHT CHARACTER WITH HIM. The result was that he acquired knowledge.

"TODAY A BOY IS CODDLED FOR TWENTY YEARS. He is raised on the indulgence of father's pocket book. He enters college with a taste for luxury and indolence. He is unable to resist the appeals of the social side of college, the lure of athletics and the instincts for importance which they feel. Formerly a boy went to college to get an education. Today he goes there to be amused."

WHATS HE WORTH WHEN OUR COLLEGES GET THRU WITH HIM?
ELSIE Robinson

And here is the cure which Roger Babson suggests:

He would cut the college course to two years.

He would install time clocks and make the students punch them.

He would train boys to habits of thrift, punctuality, conscientiousness and check up on them.

He would get rid of big business athletics—football games with tickets at $5 or $10 or what have you, and restore athletics to the masses.

He would get rid of college snobbery and stop waste.

That's Roger Babson's plan for training American youth.

Do you think it's a good plan? Or have you a better one to suggest? If so, send it in and we'll print it in this space.
